Only One Dissents

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday passed legislation to strengthen American defense outposts in the Far Pacific after Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, said that if Japan is offended, her protest should be "totally disregarded."

Approval was given to the establishment of an $8,100,000 naval and air base at Samoa and a $4,700,000 project to bolster defenses at Guam, in a $242,000,000 authorization bill expanding naval bases in American possessions in the Atlantic and Pacific and on the mainland.

Sharp denunciation of Japan featured the debate, presenting a marked contrast to prior attempts of the Navy to develop Guam as a base. The House twice before in as many years has voted down a similar proposal on the ground it was an aggressive move against Japan.

Yesterday, as the plan was revived, no voice was raised against it. And when the omnibus bill passed only Representative Marcantonio (American-Labor) voted "no."

Vinson Quotes Stark

As the debate opened, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, read a letter from Admiral Stark stressing the importance of the work contemplated at Guam, which, he said, involves only harbor improvement for a better operating center for patrol planes and the bomb-proofing of some shore installations.

Declaring that he is told the project was defeated last year "because Japan might take offense," Stark said it was "inconceivable" to him that "such inoffensive measures" should cause offense.

"If she did profess offense," he added, "it would be unwarranted, unmerited and should, in my opinion, be totally disregarded.

"After all, Guam is United States property and it seems to me our actions should be determined by what is best for the United States and not dictated by any foreign power."

Vinson read another letter from Secretary of the Navy Knox urging approval of the project, declaring that it is "of particular importance to the Navy."

Gore Is Blistering

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, urged that the United States take a strong stand against Japan. We should serve notice, he declared, that if she moves against Singapore, the American Navy will cut their lines of supply and "destroy their cities and industrial centers."

Majority Leader McCormack said that recent Japanese moves in the

Hopes for Peace

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, new Japanese Ambassador, said yesterday that his country must expand southward, that he hopes the expansion can be by peaceful economic means but that he cannot promise Japan will not use force to carry out the program.

Describing Japan as a nation bent only on preserving the peace, the Ambassador declared that war can be avoided between the United States and Japan unless the initiative comes from the American side.

"Japan will expand to the south peacefully and economically," he said in Japanese to an interpreter at his first press conference since arriving in Washington February 11.

Doesn't Expect War With U. S.

"Under the present economic bloc system Japan can no longer get goods from far places. Naturally she has to get them nearby.

"I cannot say with absolute definiteness whether Japan will have to resort to force to secure these necessities," he added.

He did not expect war with the United States, he said, unless this country makes the first move.

Six feet in height and a veteran of more than three decades in his country's navy, the Ambassador took great delight in his rejoinders to questions fired by a group of 40 reporters.

Though he has a good command of the English language, Nomura spoke through an interpreter yesterday, apparently to give himself more time to prepare careful answers to all questions.

The picture he painted of Japan's activities and of her "new order" for Asia was one of a peaceful nation intent on removing trade barriers.

"Atmosphere Not So Good"

Persistently reporters attempted to get him to express some of Japan's objections to recent American and British military movements in the Far East, to admit a danger of war with the United States, to voice Japan's objections to fortification of far Pacific Island of Guam, and to disclose the degree of cooperation existing between Japan and Germany.

None of these attempts was successful.

Expert Predicts Spring Drive By 600 U-Boats

Shipyards of Five Countries Building Subs for Germany

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 19.—A great German undersea offensive this spring with 600 submarines let loose against British shipping was predicted today by a neutral naval source.

Such a campaign would be for one of two purposes—either to prepare the way for invasion of these islands or to provide a momentary substitute for Adolf Hitler's promised assault, this observer said.

"The deciding battle of the war more likely will be fought in the northwestern approaches to Britain than on her beaches," this source said, as a result of what he pictured as a "vast" Nazi submarine building program.

In the event Hitler elects to substitute such an offensive for a spring invasion attempt, the results he would seek to achieve were predicted as twofold: To choke the flow of American supplies and empire reinforcements and to exhaust the Royal Navy's already overworked antisubmarine forces.

The Germans are reported equipped to throw 300 submarines at a time against Britain's shipping lanes. This is three times the number of U-boats attacking British shipping at any one time during the undersea campaign of 1940, the naval expert declared.

He estimated that the Germans had an undersea fleet of 300 by September, 1940, but that 100 of these always were in port and another 100 on the way to their hunting grounds.

"Because of the development of bases close to the shipping lanes and airplane reconnaissance," this observer said, "half of the present

Turks Insist They'll Stand By Greece

Press Says Axis Claim of Diplomatic Victory in Bulgar Pact Is Ridiculous

By G. E. R. Gedye
Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Feb. 19.—A definite move to refute Axis propaganda that tries to make out that the Bulgarian-Turkish declaration means a fundamental change of the Turkish attitude toward Britain and a diplomatic victory for the Axis is evident in the Turkish press today.

The proprietor of the newspaper Aksam, M. Sadak, writes today that Turkey will stand by her alliance with Britain and continue to support Greece.

Foreign propaganda, he says, has been trying to make out that the signature of the pact with Bulgaria is a sign of a change in Turkish policy. This is quite ridiculous and without substance, he concludes.

Hussein Caid Yalcin, in his editorial, ignores the pact and devotes himself to praise and encouragement of the Greeks, whom, he says, the Germans are now trying to wear down in a war of nerves. If this is unsuccessful a military offensive will follow, he says, adding that it is the Germans who have been launching the false reports of mediation and peace between Italy and Greece, as well as of a forthcoming move on the part of Yugoslavia on the side of the Axis.

Stand With Greece

"We have not the least doubt, he concludes, "that our Greek friends will in this field of intrigue show the same firmness which they have shown on the battlefield. We are morally and materially tied to Greece; not even for a moment have we ceased to consider her struggle our own. The hour for peace has not yet come for Britain. It is now the duty of the friends of peace to assert their faith in the Greeks' cause and their love of Greece."

Tomorrow Yalcin will publish an editorial in similarly strong terms concerning Turkey's absolute loyalty to the cause of Britain, and there is little doubt that these two articles are intended to refute with great emphasis the view assiduously urged by the Axis that the new agreement involves a weakening on Turkey's part.

Called "New Balkan Entente"

Istanbul, Feb. 19 (AP).—The official Turkish radio said tonight that the Axis, in reporting the pact, "has taken advantage of it for its own purpose."

Turkey's British ally, on the contrary, "has not taken this attitude, but has said that she was fully informed of the negotiations and in full agreement with them," the radio commentator added.

The newspaper Ikdam said that as a matter of fact Turkey now was in a better position to aid Greece and that if war developed in the Balkans it would be solely on Germany's responsibility.

"There are rumors in Greece which make her doubt her best friends," commented the paper Yenisabah. "We are Greece's best friend. We repeat, we believe in her and we know victory will be hers."

Another paper, Tasviri Efkar, declared, "reports that the success of

Raids Have Cost Nazis 3,101 Planes, British Report

London, Feb. 19 (INS).—German raids on Britain since the beginning of the war have cost the Nazis 3,101 planes and approximately 7,000 aviators, it was revealed today. This staggering toll, it was said, does not include craft brought down by navy vessels and armed merchantmen off the coasts of Britain.

Of the 7,000 German fliers shot down, it was said, fewer than 1,000 survived. They are in internment camps.

In striking contrast, British losses in and around Britain since the beginning of the war amount to only 851 planes, and from these 427 pilots have been saved, according to the figures.

18,000 Planes In 1941 Seen By Knudsen

U. S. Turns Out 1,036 in January; Ford Is Awarded Experimental Job

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Beginning with a record-breaking output in January of 1,036 airplanes, American production during 1941 will probably reach a total of 18,000 craft, William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, forecast yesterday.

Knudsen said, "we'll be doing all right if we get 18,000 planes this year and I think we'll get them."

He explained that the January figure represented planes delivered to the Army, Navy, commercial airlines, British and other governments. All but 26 planes, he said, were military types. Of the total, 957 were delivered to the Army, Navy and Great Britain. He declined to make a further breakdown of the total.

The figures compare with about 850 craft of all kinds produced during December, of which 799 were military types.

Ford Contract Approved

Knudsen, speaking at a press conference, also disclosed that he had approved an emergency plant facility contract to enable Henry Ford to construct and equip a factory at Ypsilanti, Mich., which will begin the production of parts and subassemblies of the B-24 bombing planes on subcontract from the so-called "fathers" of the planes, Consolidated and Douglas Aircraft Companies.

Knudsen said the first contract would be of the educational or experimental type, and would not carry a labor clause of the kind which Ford recently refused to accept. As a result he failed to obtain a truck building contract from the Army.

None of the experimental contracts approved by OPM contain the labor clause, Knudsen explained. He added that the plant contract had not yet been approved by the Army.

Foresees Solution

Speaking generally of the plane situation, the OPM chieftain said that the construction of trainers was no longer causing trouble and even the combat plane output was progressing satisfactorily. Bombers, huge craft of 40,000 pounds, he indicated, present the greatest difficulty.

Nevertheless, he forecast, bombers can be produced for the British by the fall of this year "in some quantity." By the middle of 1942, he added, American manufacturers should be turning out about 100 B-24 craft a month, with capacity for an additional 100. By the same time, he said, B-25 and B-26 bombers will be turned out at a like rate of 100 per month.

Questioned about tanks, for which a shortage of machine tools has threatened to overturn recent optimistic forecasts, Knudsen said he "guessed" that the tools would be made available and indicated his determination to obtain second-hand machine tools if new ones were diverted by priorities to other purposes.

'1'm Ready for War,' Bailey Tells Senate; Urges U. S. Intervene

North Carolinian Warns Colleagues On Peace Dictated By Totalitarians

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

United States "intervention" against the totalitarian powers in the European war yesterday was urged in the Senate as Britain's only hope of survival as a free government.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, who vehemently opposed such a policy in 1939, said he favored it now to save America from complete isolation in a hostile and totalitarian world.

"I am advocating intervention, with all of its implications," said Bailey. "I am hoping that intervention does not mean war. But I am ready if intervention does mean war."

A score of Senators, including some opponents of the lend-lease bill, crowded round the lank North Carolinian to congratulate him as he concluded: "England is fighting for her life and that is enough for me to know. If she loses, no one knows what will happen to us."

Urge "United Front"

Two other Southern Senators—Connally, of Texas, and Hill, of Alabama—took the floor to plead for "a united front for democracy" and to warn against Hitler dictation of peace terms.

Arguments for swift passage ended an hour before 5 p. m. adjournment time, and Majority Leader Barkley unexpectedly moved for immediate action on Committee amendments.

A round of protests followed from critics of the bill, seeking more time to prepare opposition speeches. Opponents agreed to proceed with amendments on a tentative basis, but the hour passed in controversial debate, without action.

A long dispute developed as Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, proposed clarifying substitutes for the committee amendment specifying Congressional purse string control over outlay and contracts.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, insisted the committee meant contract approval by Congress to apply to transfers of arms from the existing military establishment. Byrnes and Barkley denied this, contending this section was restricted solely by a $1,300,000,000 limitation on loan of arms already financed by Congress.

Byrnes explained he was moving merely to correct a draftsmanship error. He said there was no change in the committee's original intent to require Congressional appropriations or contract authorizations before the President may proceed with new money aid commitments.

Despite failure of the first attempt at Senate action, Majority

Opposition to GHA Aimless, Counsel Seeks to Prove

By Gerald G. Gross.
Post Staff Writer

Some of Washington's leading physicians were depicted yesterday as having been stampeded into aimless opposition to the group health movement by the founding of a medical center to care for Federal workers on a subscription basis.

Using the defendants' own letters and recorded discussions, or those of their professional associates, the Government presented to a District Court jury scores of documents which it hopes will help convict four medical bodies and 20 individual doctors of antitrust law violations.

"We are having a great time locally here at the moment," Dr. William P. Herbst wrote on June 25, 1937, to Dr. Olin West. "That Group Health Service affair of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has already been incorporated and our executive committee had a meeting with some of their representatives last night and it certainly looks bad.

"It was brought out that it is possible for them to borrow money from the HOLC when and if necessary at any time for any purpose in regard to the health program.

"Just what is going to come out of the whole affair is impossible to predict at this time, but there are going to be some conferences in an attempt to go along with this outfit if it is possible to do so and retain our faces."

Dr. Herbst, who is not an individual defendant, is a member of the District Medical Society which, along with the American Medical

Big Zinc Mill Is Shut Down By CIO Strike

Union Defies Its Chiefs; Walkout Threat at Bethlehem Steel Plant

By the Associated Press

Operation of one of the Nation's largest plants producing zinc—vital to the making of shells for national defense—was halted yesterday by a strike at Donora, Pa., staged in defiance of orders of high CIO executives.

Ten big furnaces in the mill of the American Steel and Wire Co. were "deadened" or banked as pickets blocked gates despite a telegraphic command from Clinton S. Golden, of nearby Pittsburg, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, that the men return to work.

Approximately 950 workers were involved. The dispute is over demands by 42 mechanical maintenance men for wage adjustments.

The concern is a subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Murray Threatens Strike

Meanwhile a threat of a strike in a defense plant employing 14,000 men was voiced by Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. He notified defense authorities in Washington that unless they were "prepared to see" that the Bethlehem Steel Co. "discon-

New York, Feb. 19.—While opposing war, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today there were "some things" worth dying for but refused to define her feelings definitely, when asked if she would be willing to see the United States enter the war to save Great Britain.

Her opinion was expressed while replying to a barrage of questions, following an address on "Education and Democracy" at Hunter College before alumnae, faculty and students.

Boy's Joy in New Bike Short-Lived; Auto Kills Him

Ten-year-old George Willner, jr., of 1055 Nelson Street, Arlington, Va., had always wanted a bicycle. For more than a year he sold magazines and last month was able to buy a bicycle.

WILLNER

Last night he was dead—killed by an automobile while riding his bicycle home from school.

It was Arlington County's first traffic fatality of the year.

George was struck at Eleventh and Stafford Streets, Arlington, by a car driven by Jasper Harrison, 20, of 615 North Piedmont Street, Arlington.

His grief-numbed father, an employe of the Government Printing Office, told of the youngster's success with his magazine route and his excellent grades in the fourth grade of Thomas Nelson Page School, at Ballston. He was the only child.

Harrison was released without charges by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas to the custody of his uncle, Oscar Carter, of the same address.

Juvenile Court Criticized

Youthful Parking Meter Thieves Harass D. C. Police

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A juvenile crime problem which currently threatens to get out of hand has harassed Washington police for the past six months, it was learned last night. Nearly every one of the city's 260 parking meters has been broken into and looted by youthful thieves.

Since July, a total of 76 arrests have been made—but in no case have Juvenile Court authorities seen fit to impose punishment on the offenders, it was reported. One 16-year-old youth has been arrested seven times for parking meter depredations, and as many times has been granted probation in Juvenile Court, according to police records.

Among the 76 arrests were 20 "repeaters"—youngsters with two or more offenses of looting, said Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Precinct, who was assigned to investigate by Police Superintendent Brown.

Losses and meter repair costs during the six months period have amounted to $1,800, the District Tax Collector's Office reported.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday that 60 meters now are under repair and out of operation.

The young raiders, operating between the hours of 10 p. m. and 2 a. m., have become so confident of escaping punishment in Juvenile

Radio Music War Nears End As ASCAP Approves Decree

By Edwin C. Stein
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 19.—The radio music war between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the broadcasting chains neared an end today when ASCAP's board of directors approved acceptance of a consent decree to end an antiairtrust suit brought by the Department of Justice.

Although ASCAP songs will not immediately return to the air, it is almost a foregone conclusion that a complete settlement of the war is in prospect. The consent decree removes practically every important point of disagreement between the warring factions.

A general meeting of the ASCAP membership will be held in New York tomorrow night to ratify acceptance of the consent decree. This is regarded as no more than a formality.

Terms of the decree follow:

1. ASCAP agrees to offer broadcasters their choice between a blanket or per program license. In either case, fees will be paid only for programs using ASCAP music. On a network basis, the entire fee will be paid by the originating station.

2. ASCAP will make eligible for membership any composer who has had one song published,

Trade Barriers Between States Called a Peril

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Elimination of interstate trade barriers which form a threat to national unity or to the defense program was urged on the Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday by officials of the Department of Commerce.

Pointing out that the defense effort was America's most important present consideration, Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor asserted that "State barriers which interfere with maximum production . . . must be lifted."

However, TNEC Chairman O'Mahoney sharply criticized the department's proposal for the creation of a continuing joint Federal-State committee to study the trade barrier problem and to propose solutions to Congress.

"Congress has all the power now to obtain this information. The trouble is, it doesn't exercise it," commented Senator O'Mahoney. "I don't see much hope for the development of individual security by constantly expanding our Government—I don't think Big Government is the cure."

Undersecretary Taylor told the Committee it should make no recommendations "which could in any way slow down our national defense effort, or interfere with our ability to act forcibly and effectively as a unified Nation."

"After we have placed ourselves in a position to defend ourselves as a Nation," he said, "we can review the situation as it then exists, but until we are in that position, industry, agriculture, labor and finance must ben every effort to meet the national needs."

Taylor, a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, declared that external events had so greatly altered the Nation's economic situation that "instead of attempting to stimulate competition in certain fields ,the Government finds it must take measures to control it."

"The needs of the Government itself are so great that it cannot permit private individuals to compete with Government for what appear to be scanty supplies of essential materials . . . During the short span of eight years we have traveled from almost complete industrial stagnation to the necessity of allocating production in some important areas, from almost Nation-wide unemployment to serious labor shortage in certain specialized fields," he said.

Influenza Puts District's No. 1 Select in Hospital

The District's No. 1 selectee, 21-year-old Harry R. Bell, who was the first local registrant to have his number called and was sent to Edgewood Arsenal December 16, was in Walter Reed Hospital yesterday with "a touch of influenza."

BELL

On his second trip home since his induction, Bell suffered a bad cold Saturday night and was taken to the military hospital with a temperature of 104. He is expected to be in the hospital two weeks.

Bell, who lives at 618 Rock Creek Church Road, was the first District selectee to be promoted to private first class. He had expected to represent the Edgewood post in a boxing tournament here Friday.

Hospital officials last night said his condition was not serious. Bell is the son of Harry R. Bell, sr., a fireman with No. 24 Engine Co.

Winant Calls on U. S. to Send Britain Arms

By the Associated Press

Concord, N. H., Feb. 18.—John G. Winant, newly appointed Ambassador to Great Britain, urged today that this country serve as a source of "supply against aggressor nations" and provide England with needed tools in order that it "might finish the job."

Frequently cheered as he addressed a joint session of the New Hampshire Leglislature, the former New Hampshire Governor declared that "what we do together can never fail."

"There is nothing today that in my opinion means so much in this country as unity in support of right action," he asserted. "Everybody counts."

Referring to the last months he was in Geneva as director of the International Labor Office, Winant said:

"Many of the men with whom I have been well acquainted in European countries now are killed or imprisoned.

"Workers in those countries have been denied the right to organize. I saw not hundreds, but thousands and thousands of families driven out of their homes by the invader.

"That's what happens to you and to workers and to farm people who come under the heel of an invader."

The Ambassador said that England had asked for tools "that they might finish the job. We can stand with them as free men in the comradeship of hard work, not asking but giving . . . With God's will and a just cause we can do no less."

Concord, N. H., Feb. 18 (INS).—After John G. Winant today addressed the State Legislature, seven legislators filed a formal protest with Gov. Robert O. Blood against the Governor's introduction in which he referred to England as "our fatherland."

Chaplain Edwin Young also referred to England as "our fatherland."

"We bitterly resent the reference made by you to England as our fatherland," the protest informed the Governor." "We, as Americans, cannot have two fatherlands. The only place to be a fatherland, to us, is the good old U. S. A."

Army Urged To Modernize Its Command

The Army was urged yesterday by one of its own officers to replace "conservatives and traditionalists" in high commands by men better able to understand modern warfare.

Lieut. Col. Thomas R. Phillips, former instructor at the Army's Command and General Staff School, declared that the Nation might have to pay in "needless head and wounded" and "even lost wars" for not modernizing its weapons and tactics in the post-World War years.

In an article prepared for a forthcoming issue of the Infantry Journal, Phillips declares that the Army has "few enough capable military students" and few of them in policy-making posts.

In support of his contention, Phillips declared that the possibilities of the tank were generally not recognized in the American Army until the present war forcibly demonstrated them.

"Here is a weapon ideally suited to the greatest industrial nation on earth and to a soldier personnel, every one of whom is able to drive a car and has some elemental mechanical education," he declared.

"At the outbreak of the European war we had some 300 light tanks, we had no homogeneous armored divisions capable of independent action . . . The reasons for the shortage of tanks are exclusively our own fault.

Phillips' lecture to his colleagues, entitled "Traditionalism and Military Defeat," goes on to criticize the Army for not motorizing supply trains, creating self-contained combat teams or replacing World War French field guns with modern howitzers until 1939.

The writer, now a general staff officer in Puerto Rico, describes maneuvers in which troops marched all night when they could have been carried in motor trucks "completely around the division being attacked, three times in a single night."

"It is like a fantasy," he said, "the nostalgia of men who want to return to a never-never land."

Mrs. Roosevelt Backs Symphony By Word and Deed

Mrs. Roosevelt sent a subscription to the National Symphony Orchestra's campaign for funds yesterday with a note expressing hope for the drive's success.

"I have always enjoyed the concerts which I have been able to attend and I think the District is fortunate in having this orchestra," wrote the First Lady.

Another appeal for the symphony's support came from Dr. Kurt Hetzel, conductor of the Washington Civic Orchestra, who declared:

"Now, there is talk about disbanding the orchestra. Suppose the owner of a great and beautiful house, who spends a lot of money on its upkeep, would, all of a sudden, throw his piano on the street, with the explanation that he cannot afford the price of a tuning any longer?"

The campaign, which was still $59,000 short of its $107,600 goal yesterday, ends at noon February 20.

Only One Dissents

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday passed legislation to strengthen American defense outposts in the Far Pacific after Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, said that if Japan is offended, her protest should be "totally disregarded."

Approval was given to the establishment of an $8,100,000 naval and air base at Samoa and a $4,700,000 project to bolster defenses at Guam, in a $242,000,000 authorization bill expanding naval bases in American possessions in the Atlantic and Pacific and on the mainland.

Sharp denunciation of Japan featured the debate, presenting a marked contrast to prior attempts of the Navy to develop Guam as a base. The House twice before in as many years has voted down a similar proposal on the ground it was an aggressive move against Japan.

Yesterday, as the plan was revived, no voice was raised against it. And when the omnibus bill passed only Representative Marcantonio (American-Labor) voted "no."

Vinson Quotes Stark

As the debate opened, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, read a letter from Admiral Stark stressing the importance of the work contemplated at Guam, which, he said, involves only harbor improvement for a better operating center for patrol planes and the bomb-proofing of some shore installations.

Declaring that he is told the project was defeated last year "because Japan might take offense," Stark said it was "inconceivable" to him that "such inoffensive measures" should cause offense.

"If she did profess offense," he added, "it would be unwarranted, unmerited and should, in my opinion, be totally disregarded.

"After all, Guam is United States property and it seems to me our actions should be determined by what is best for the United States and not dictated by any foreign power."

Vinson read another letter from Secretary of the Navy Knox urging approval of the project, declaring that it is "of particular importance to the Navy."

Gore Is Blistering

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, urged that the United States take a strong stand against Japan. We should serve notice, he declared, that if she moves against Singapore, the American Navy will cut their lines of supply and "destroy their cities and industrial centers."

Majority Leader McCormack said that recent Japanese moves in the

Hopes for Peace

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, new Japanese Ambassador, said yesterday that his country must expand southward, that he hopes the expansion can be by peaceful economic means but that he cannot promise Japan will not use force to carry out the program.

Describing Japan as a nation bent only on preserving the peace, the Ambassador declared that war can be avoided between the United States and Japan unless the initiative comes from the American side.

"Japan will expand to the south peacefully and economically," he said in Japanese to an interpreter at his first press conference since arriving in Washington February 11.

Doesn't Expect War With U. S.

"Under the present economic bloc system Japan can no longer get goods from far places. Naturally she has to get them nearby.

"I cannot say with absolute definiteness whether Japan will have to resort to force to secure these necessities," he added.

He did not expect war with the United States, he said, unless this country makes the first move.

Six feet in height and a veteran of more than three decades in his country's navy, the Ambassador took great delight in his rejoinders to questions fired by a group of 40 reporters.

Though he has a good command of the English language, Nomura spoke through an interpreter yesterday, apparently to give himself more time to prepare careful answers to all questions.

The picture he painted of Japan's activities and of her "new order" for Asia was one of a peaceful nation intent on removing trade barriers.

"Atmosphere Not So Good"

Persistently reporters attempted to get him to express some of Japan's objections to recent American and British military movements in the Far East, to admit a danger of war with the United States, to voice Japan's objections to fortification of far Pacific Island of Guam, and to disclose the degree of cooperation existing between Japan and Germany.

None of these attempts was successful.

Expert Predicts Spring Drive By 600 U-Boats

Shipyards of Five Countries Building Subs for Germany

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 19.—A great German undersea offensive this spring with 600 submarines let loose against British shipping was predicted today by a neutral naval source.

Such a campaign would be for one of two purposes—either to prepare the way for invasion of these islands or to provide a momentary substitute for Adolf Hitler's promised assault, this observer said.

"The deciding battle of the war more likely will be fought in the northwestern approaches to Britain than on her beaches," this source said, as a result of what he pictured as a "vast" Nazi submarine building program.

In the event Hitler elects to substitute such an offensive for a spring invasion attempt, the results he would seek to achieve were predicted as twofold: To choke the flow of American supplies and empire reinforcements and to exhaust the Royal Navy's already overworked antisubmarine forces.

The Germans are reported equipped to throw 300 submarines at a time against Britain's shipping lanes. This is three times the number of U-boats attacking British shipping at any one time during the undersea campaign of 1940, the naval expert declared.

He estimated that the Germans had an undersea fleet of 300 by September, 1940, but that 100 of these always were in port and another 100 on the way to their hunting grounds.

"Because of the development of bases close to the shipping lanes and airplane reconnaissance," this observer said, "half of the present

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Feb. 19.—A definite move to refute Axis propaganda that tries to make out that the Bulgarian-Turkish declaration means a fundamental change of the Turkish attitude toward Britain and a diplomatic victory for the Axis is evident in the Turkish press today.

The proprietor of the newspaper Aksam, M. Sadak, writes today that Turkey will stand by her alliance with Britain and continue to support Greece.

Foreign propaganda, he says, has been trying to make out that the signature of the pact with Bulgaria is a sign of a change in Turkish policy. This is quite ridiculous and without substance, he concludes.

Hussein Caid Yalcin, in his editorial, ignores the pact and devotes himself to praise and encouragement of the Greeks, whom, he says, the Germans are now trying to wear down in a war of nerves. If this is unsuccessful a military offensive will follow, he says, adding that it is the Germans who have been launching the false reports of mediation and peace between Italy and Greece, as well as of a forthcoming move on the part of Yugoslavia on the side of the Axis.

Stand With Greece

"We have not the least doubt, he concludes, "that our Greek friends will in this field of intrigue show the same firmness which they have shown on the battlefield. We are morally and materially tied to Greece; not even for a moment have we ceased to consider her struggle our own. The hour for peace has not yet come for Britain. It is now the duty of the friends of peace to assert their faith in the Greeks' cause and their love of Greece."

Tomorrow Yalcin will publish an editorial in similarly strong terms concerning Turkey's absolute loyalty to the cause of Britain, and there is little doubt that these two articles are intended to refute with great emphasis the view assiduously urged by the Axis that the new agreement involves a weakening on Turkey's part.

Called "New Balkan Entente"

Istanbul, Feb. 19 (AP).—The official Turkish radio said tonight that the Axis, in reporting the pact, "has taken advantage of it for its own purpose."

Turkey's British ally, on the contrary, "has not taken this attitude, but has said that she was fully informed of the negotiations and in full agreement with them," the radio commentator added.

The newspaper Ikdam said that as a matter of fact Turkey now was in a better position to aid Greece and that if war developed in the Balkans it would be solely on Germany's responsibility.

"There are rumors in Greece which make her doubt her best friends," commented the paper Yenisabah. "We are Greece's best friend. We repeat, we believe in her and we know victory will be hers."

Another paper, Tasviri Efkar, declared, "reports that the success of

Raids Have Cost Nazis 3,101 Planes, British Report

London, Feb. 19 (INS).—German raids on Britain since the beginning of the war have cost the Nazis 3,101 planes and approximately 7,000 aviators, it was revealed today. This staggering toll, it was said, does not include craft brought down by navy vessels and armed merchantmen off the coasts of Britain.

Of the 7,000 German fliers shot down, it was said, fewer than 1,000 survived. They are in internment camps.

In striking contrast, British losses in and around Britain since the beginning of the war amount to only 851 planes, and from these 427 pilots have been saved, according to the figures.

Blossom to Forego Defense Profits

Francis Blossom, member of the War Department's Construction Advisory Committee, yesterday told the House Military Affairs Committee that, since he is drawing a $6,500 Federal salary, he will not share in the 1940 or 1941 profits of his New York construction firm, which holds an $11,564,000 contract for building a shell loading plant.

18,000 Planes In 1941 Seen By Knudsen

U. S. Turns Out 1,036 in January; Ford Is Awarded Experimental Job

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Beginning with a record-breaking output in January of 1,036 airplanes, American production during 1941 will probably reach a total of 18,000 craft, William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, forecast yesterday.

Knudsen said, "we'll be doing all right if we get 18,000 planes this year and I think we'll get them."

He explained that the January figure represented planes delivered to the Army, Navy, commercial airlines, British and other governments. All but 26 planes, he said, were military types. Of the total, 957 were delivered to the Army, Navy and Great Britain. He declined to make a further breakdown of the total.

The figures compare with about 850 craft of all kinds produced during December, of which 799 were military types.

Ford Contract Approved

Knudsen, speaking at a press conference, also disclosed that he had approved an emergency plant facility contract to enable Henry Ford to construct and equip a factory at Ypsilanti, Mich., which will begin the production of parts and subassemblies of the B-24 bombing planes on subcontract from the so-called "fathers" of the planes, Consolidated and Douglas Aircraft Companies.

Knudsen said the first contract would be of the educational or experimental type, and would not carry a labor clause of the kind which Ford recently refused to accept. As a result he failed to obtain a truck building contract from the Army.

None of the experimental contracts approved by OPM contain the labor clause, Knudsen explained. He added that the plant contract had not yet been approved by the Army.

Foresees Solution

Speaking generally of the plane situation, the OPM chieftain said that the construction of trainers was no longer causing trouble and even the combat plane output was progressing satisfactorily. Bombers, huge craft of 40,000 pounds, he indicated, present the greatest difficulty.

Nevertheless, he forecast, bombers can be produced for the British by the fall of this year "in some quantity." By the middle of 1942, he added, American manufacturers should be turning out about 100 B-24 craft a month, with capacity for an additional 100. By the same time, he said, B-25 and B-26 bombers will be turned out at a like rate of 100 per month.

Questioned about tanks, for which a shortage of machine tools has threatened to overturn recent optimistic forecasts, Knudsen said he "guessed" that the tools would be made available and indicated his determination to obtain second-hand machine tools if new ones were diverted by priorities to other purposes.

North Carolinian Warns Colleagues On Peace Dictated By Totalitarians

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

United States "intervention" against the totalitarian powers in the European war yesterday was urged in the Senate as Britain's only hope of survival as a free government.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, who vehemently opposed such a policy in 1939, said he favored it now to save America from complete isolation in a hostile and totalitarian world.

"I am advocating intervention, with all of its implications," said Bailey. "I am hoping that intervention does not mean war. But I am ready if intervention does mean war."

A score of Senators, including some opponents of the lend-lease bill, crowded round the lank North Carolinian to congratulate him as he concluded: "England is fighting for her life and that is enough for me to know. If she loses, no one knows what will happen to us."

Urge "United Front"

Two other Southern Senators—Connally, of Texas, and Hill, of Alabama—took the floor to plead for "a united front for democracy" and to warn against Hitler dictation of peace terms.

Arguments for swift passage ended an hour before 5 p. m. adjournment time, and Majority Leader Barkley unexpectedly moved for immediate action on committee amendments.

A round of protests followed from critics of the bill, seeking more time to prepare opposition speeches. Opponents agreed to proceed with amendments on a tentative basis, but the hour passed in controversial debate, without action.

A long dispute developed as Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, proposed clarifying substi-

Opposition to GHA Aimless, Counsel Seeks to Prove

By Gerald G. Gross.

Some of Washington's leading physicians were depicted yesterday as having been stampeded into aimless opposition to the group health movement by the founding of a medical center to care for Federal workers on a subscription basis.

Using the defendants' own letters and recorded discussions, or those of their professional associates, the Government presented to a District Court jury scores of documents which it hopes will help convict four medical bodies and 20 individual doctors of antitrust law violations.

"We are having a great time locally here at the moment," Dr. William P. Herbst wrote on June 25, 1937, to Dr. Olin West. "That Group Health Service affair of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has already been incorporated and our executive committee had a meeting with some of their representatives last night and it certainly looks bad.

"It was brought out that it is possible for them to borrow money from the HOLC when and if necessary at any time for any purpose in regard to the health program.

"Just what is going to come out of the whole affair is impossible to predict at this time, but there are going to be some conferences in an attempt to go along with this outfit if it is possible to do so and retain our faces."

Dr. Herbst, who is not an individual defendant, is a member of the District Medical Society which, along with the American Medical

By the Associated Press

Operation of one of the Nation's largest plants producing zinc—vital to the making of shells for national defense—was halted yesterday by a strike at Donora, Pa., staged in defiance of orders of high CIO executives.

Ten big furnaces in the mill of the American Steel and Wire Co. were "deadened" or banked as pickets blocked gates despite a telegraphic command from Clinton S. Golden, of nearby Pittsburg, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, that the men return to work.

Approximately 950 workers were involved. The dispute is over demands by 42 mechanical maintenance men for wage adjustments.

The concern is a subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

Murray Threatens Strike

Meanwhile a threat of a strike in a defense plant employing 14,000 men was voiced by Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. He notified defense authorities in Washington that unless they were "prepared to see" that the Bethlehem Steel Co. "discon-

First Lady Hints War Might Be Best Course

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Feb. 19.—While opposing war, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today there were "some things" worth dying for but refused to define her feelings definitely, when asked if she would be willing to see the United States enter the war to save Great Britain.

Her opinion was expressed while replying to a barrage of questions, following an address on "Education and Democracy" at Hunter College before alumnae, faculty and students.

Boy's Joy in New Bike Short-Lived; Auto Kills Him

Ten-year-old George Willner, jr., of 1055 Nelson Street, Arlington, Va., had always wanted a bicycle. For more than a year he sold magazines and last month was able to buy a bicycle.

WILLNER

Last night he was dead—killed by an automobile while riding his bicycle home from school.

It was Arlington County's first traffic fatality of the year.

George was struck at Eleventh and Stafford Streets, Arlington, by a car driven by Jasper Harrison, 20, of 615 North Piedmont Street, Arlington.

His grief-numbed father, an employe of the Government Printing Office, told of the youngster's success with his magazine route and his excellent grades in the fourth grade of Thomas Nelson Page School, at Ballston. He was the only child.

Harrison was released without charges by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas to the custody of his uncle, Oscar Carter, of the same address.

Juvenile Court Criticized

Youthful Parking Meter Thieves Harass D. C. Police

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A juvenile crime problem which currently threatens to get out of hand has harassed Washington police for the past six months, it was learned last night. Nearly every one of the city's 260 parking meters has been broken into and looted by youthful thieves.

Since July, a total of 76 arrests have been made—but in no case have Juvenile Court authorities seen fit to impose punishment on the offenders, it was reported. One 16-year-old youth has been arrested seven times for parking meter depredations, and as many times has been granted probation in Juvenile Court, according to police records.

Among the 76 arrests were 20 "repeaters"—youngsters with two or more offenses of looting, said Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Precinct, who was assigned to investigate by Police Superintendent Brown.

Losses and meter repair costs during the six months period have amounted to $1,800, the District Tax Collector's Office reported.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday that 60 meters now are under repair and out of operation.

The young raiders, operating between the hours of 10 p. m. and 2 a. m., have become so confident of escaping punishment in Juvenile

Radio Music War Nears End As ASCAP Approves Decree

By Edwin C. Stein
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 19.—The radio music war between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the broadcasting chains neared an end today when ASCAP's board of directors approved acceptance of a consent decree to end an antiairtrust suit brought by the Department of Justice.

Although ASCAP songs will not immediately return to the air, it is almost a foregone conclusion that a complete settlement of the war is in prospect. The consent decree removes practically every important point of disagreement between the warring factions.

A general meeting of the ASCAP membership will be held in New York tomorrow night to ratify acceptance of the consent decree. This is regarded as no more than a formality.

Terms of the decree follow:

1. ASCAP agrees to offer broadcasters their choice between a blanket or per program license. In either case, fees will be paid only for programs using ASCAP music. On a network basis, the entire fee will be paid by the originating station.

2. ASCAP will make eligible for membership any composer who has had one song published,

Antistrike Bill Disapproved By Knudsen

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Director William S. Knudsen, of the Office of Production Management, yesterday refused to recommend antistrike legislation for defense industries and asserted that current labor stoppages are not seriously damaging the rearmament program.

At the same time, however, he indorsed mediation and a "cooling-off" period in industrial disputes, to be followed if necessary by arbitration. But he disapproved proposals to make striking a criminal offense.

"The strike has to be negotiated out rather than legislated out," said Knudsen. "I don't think conditions today warrant me in making any recommendations for legislation." The defense chieftain testified at House Judiciary Committee hearings early in the day, and subsequently held a press conference in his own office.

Knudsen revealed that he had no advance knowledge of the War Department's decision to require a guarantee of compliance with labor laws in all contracts obtained through competitive bidding. It was refusal to accept this provision that recently caused the Ford Motor Co. to lose a large motor contract, even though Ford was low bidder.

14 Defense Strikes Now

He said this was the first contract of the kind, that the labor stipulation is included in all competitive-bid contracts now, but that is it not required in negotiated contracts. He explained that this lack of uniformity was now under discussion "and we will work it out one of these days."

Knudsen asserted that at present there are 14 strikes in defense industries, but none in "key" plants. He termed the work stoppages "annoying" but not serious, and added that he expected "nothing serious."

At the very end of his 90 minutes on the witness stand, he agreed with Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, that mediation and a "cooling-off" period were desirable, and that if mediation fails, there should be arbitration. Further discussion was cut short by a midday appointment at the White House; but Knudsen received permission to submit a memorandum on a bill sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, which would impose criminal penalties for striking during a 30-day mediation period.

Bill Contains "Good Suggestions"

The Smith bill contains "some very good suggestions" in respect to the mediation facilities it would set up, he said, but he declared that "I don't believe you can make a man a criminal because he is striking."

Knudsen attributed to "inexperienced leadership" some of the present labor troubles, such as the Allis-Chalmers strike in Milwaukee. "As we get more conservative leadership in the unions, little by little we'll do better," he said.

Knudsen replied to a committee member who asked him about sabotage: "It's always with us, but I don't think it amounts to much."

To a query about the propriety of high union initiation fees, Knudsen said:

"High initiation fees and strong control over unions are simply put there for the protection of the craft."

Hillman to Testify Today

"Did you say 'craft' or 'graft?'" queried Committee Chairman Sumners, as the room rocked with laughter.

In a warm exchange with Knudsen, Representative Hobbs shouted: "You say you can't make it a crime to strike. It's done in the case of 17,000,000 draftees, who can be locked up if they refuse to work."

Representative Eliot (Democrat), of Massachusetts, interposed with the observation that there was a "sharp distinction between drafting men for United States service and compelling them to work for the wages set by a corporation in the Middle West."

"If we could once get across to labor and industry how vital this program is to our future, to life in the United States, then I don't think that any dispute could stop the program," Knudsen observed.

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, will take the stand today.

Bailey Demands U. S. 'Intervention'

Leader Barkley said he expects a final vote by February 27. Only two or three more speakers for the bill will be sent to the floor. The opposition was running short of prepared speakers, but will resume again tomorrow and continue speeches through Tuesday. Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, a Democratic "non-committal," will speak all day today.

During the first lull in debate, Barkley served notice he will again call up committee amendments.

Senator Bailey, sixth speaker for the bill, built his case for "intervention" on the post war threat to United States security should England bow to the Axis.

"Your country and my country would be alone," he said. "Germany would be in control of Europe and the far Atlantic. Germany and Italy would be in control of the Mediterranean and the gates of Gibraltar and the Suez—Japan in control of Asia, the West Pacific and the South Seas. We would live by sufferance. . . . We would never know when these powers would proceed to take us."

Hits at Opposition

Slapping at the opposition, he said "the isolationists would have their way then—we would be isolated airtight."

This brought Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, to his feet with a reminder that Bailey had "changed his position" from his Neutrality Act stand in October, 1939. At that time Bailey said: "It is not our war. It is not a world war. There is nothing involved in it that would justify our getting into it."

Bailey replied that he admired the "tenacity" of anyone who could still hold that view "after all that has happened" since 1939.

"I didn't think it was our war then," said Bailey. "I am not advocating war now. I am advocating intervention, with all of its implications. I'm not hedging."

Bailey said the American people have given every indication they desire their Government "to resist the totalitarian powers."

"In this course lies the only hope of England," he said. "It is intervention. We may not regard it as war and intervention is not necessarily war. But there is no denying that the totalitarian powers may regard it as war.

Provocation Isn't Necessary

"The totalitarian powers are not moved by provocation. They will move just as quickly without provocation. . . . They will fight this country whenever they think they can whip us and not before."

He said he thought it would be well for Hitler, Mussolini and the war party in Japan to know "that there is a country left in the world that will not stop short once the gauge of battle is flung down."

"There is a great deal of probability that war is coming, whichever way we go," he said. "But I question whether this will lead to war. Our object is to head off war. We hope to enable England to win the fight. I seriously question whether anything will happen that will require our soldiers.

Ridicules Lindberg's Argument

"But if anybody asks me what we are going to do if Japan and Germany declare war on us, I am going to tell them. We are going to fight to the last ditch."

Ridiculing the Lindbergh argument for a negotiated peace, he said, "if that's what you want, you can have peace."

"All you have to do is stand from under and let England down, and there will be a negotiated peace. You'll have peace all right—a Hitler peace. France has peace. . . . But I think there is more peace tonight in England under German bombs than there is in Paris."

He recalled that "Chamberlain negotiated a peace with Hitler once—the peace of Munich."

Senataor Wheeler, unrelenting foe of the bill, was among the first to shake Bailey's hand as he finished. Barkley and Chairman George of the Foreign Relations Committee congratulated him. Among the others were Senators Wiley, of Wisconsin, and Davis, of Pennsylvania, Republicans, whose votes are still uncommitted.

Connally Asks Unity

Leading off the day's speeches for the bill, Senator Connally, one of the measure's Senate managers, addressed an appeal for unity to the Senate and to the country.

Connally called the European conflict a "death struggle of democracy against ruthless tyranny" and warned: "The democracies of the world must all hang together or they shall hang separately."

He denounced as "specious" the opposition charge that the bill makes President Roosevelt a "dictator."

"In foreign affairs America should face the world as a united people," he said. "Our own material interests, our prestige before the world and our own domestic tranquillity require that we meet this titanic issue with a single voice and a single purpose. America must play the part of America. It must not fail."

Senator Hill urged swift passage of the bill as America's surest hope of gaining time for defense. Should England fall, he said the United States will face "the jaws of a gigantic pincers movement."

"One jaw," Hill said, "will be in Japan and the other in world-conquering Germany while South America will be the handle through which the pressure will be applied to us."

Hill envisaged the "defeat and disintegration" of the Axis powers if England, with United States help, survives the crisis of the coming spring and summer.

U.S. Financing Magnesium And Tin Plant

Indications of an increased tempo in meeting fundamental requirements for national defense were seen yesterday in announcements of financing plans for tin and magnesium plants and the granting of certificates of necessity covering a $67,000,000 expansion of defense factories.

Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, told a press conference that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had contracted with N. V. Billiton-Maastschapij, a Dutch smelting firm, to build a tin smelter at one of a dozen locations being considered in the southern part of the country. The plant is expected to turn out annually 18,000 tons of tin from Bolivian ore.

In addition, he said the RFC had loaned about $9,250,000 to Henry J. Kaiser, president of the California Todd Shipbuilding Corporation, to erect at San Francisco a magnesium plant expected to produce between 12,000 and 15,000 tons a year. The plant would be completed in six to nine months and would double this country's magnesium production.

Plans for additional aluminum plants were still in the "think" stage, Jones said. He asserted, however, a willingness of the RFC to finance a plant for the Reynolds Metal Corporation if it wished.

Jones said that the construction of a synthetic rubber factory had been under discussion and that a study of it had been completed so that if the need arose, the RFC could act quickly.

He implied that present flow of rubber from the Netherland Indies appeared to be adequate and said he did not believe it was endangered. If it were cut, however, he said that supplies of rubber in this country and on the high seas were sufficient, "with a little skimping," to last from 18 to 20 months.

Meantime, the question of expanding steel production facilities was discussed yesterday with President Roosevelt by two top executives of "Big Steel." Benjamin F. Fairless, president, and Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of U. S. Steel Corporation, called at the White House to offer cooperation in the defense program.

Ickes Ridicules Marshall's Charge

Secretary of Interior Ickes said yesterday that the Roosevelt Administration had no idea whatever of censoring the radio or press services and he called an assertion to the contrary a "toy balloon."

He made the comment in reply to questions about a statement in Chicago Tuesday by Verne Marshall, chairman of the no foreign war committee.

Marshall said he had learned here Sunday that "there is a plan for Secretary Ickes to take over the authority now exercised by the Federal Communications Commission (radio regulatory body) and to undertake to assume administrative censorship of the news wire services."

Former Navy Official Gets New Jersey Post

Shaw Named As Hull Aide By Roosevelt

G. Howland Shaw was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt for promotion from the career foreign service to a post as Assistant Secretary of State.

Serving recently as chief of the division of Foreign Service personnel, the 48-year-old diplomat formerly headed the State Department's Near Eastern division and was twice assigned to Istanbul, Turkey.

A native of Boston, Shaw was educated at Harvard and began his State Department career as a $1,200-a-year clerk. He entered the Foreign Service in 1918.

Shaw was attached to the American Peace Commission at the Versailles conference and later was assigned to the American Mission at the Lausanne Conference in 1923.

In his spare time he has taken an active interest in prison reform and delinquency problems.

Shaw is a member of the board of trustees and board of visitors of the National Training School for Boys, vice president and director of the Children's Village (Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.), president of the Osborne Association, a member of the board of directors of the American Prison Association, the National Committee for Metal Hygiene and other organizations devoted to helping underprivileged persons. He is a bachelor.

The assistant secretaryship to which he was nominated has been vacant for some time.

Mo. Court Orders Donnell Seated As Governor

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 19 (AP).—The State Supreme Court ordered the Legislature today to seat Forrest C. Donnell, Republican, as Governor immediately. The opinion was unanimous.

Donnell's seating had been delayed pending outcome of a contest of his 3,613-vote majority over Lawrence McDaniel, Democrat, in last November's election.

The Democrat-controled Assembly had ordered a legislative investigation of election fraud charges.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, a Democrat, has remained in office pending outcome of the contest.

tinues its unlawful and discriminatory practices the company's Lackawanna, N. Y., plant would be closed.

Murray protested to Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management, that the company had "locked out" 300 employes. He said he understood that the company had employed deputy sheriffs, private police and a "large number of professional strikebreakers."

In Buffalo, a National Labor Board official declared that the SWOC had filed charges against Bethlehem in connection with the alleged "lock-out."

William S. Knudsen, director of the OPM, expressed the view meanwhile that the four-week-old strike at the Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee would be settled tomorrow.

Conferences in Milwaukee brought no signs of an agreement, however. A truce was worked out in Washington Saturday, but company and union have interpreted it differently.

These other labor disputes were reported in other cities yesterday:

Minneapolis—C. I. O. officials of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Unions at the Minneapolis and Hopkins plants of the Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Co. drafted strike notices affecting some 2,000 men working on farm equipment, shell castings and defense subcontracts. The dispute centers upon wages, longer vacations and a closed shop demand. Under Minnesota's labor relations act, a strike probably could not occur for 40 days.

Chicago—The C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers organizing committee said that a majority of the production employes at the McCormick works of the International Harvester Co. had voted in favor of a strike call.

A spokesman for the union said that out of the 5,900 employes eligible to vote, 3,467 cast ballots and 3,050 voted for the strike.

Kenosha, Wis.—A union official said that union workers of the Nash Kelvinator plant had voted, 8 to 1, to strike. The union was said to be dissatisfied with results of negotiations for the hiring of employes at the company's Racine, Wis., plant.

The officer is now in Washington on a British military mission. The ball is for the benefit of the British War Relief Society, which has headquarters at 1801 Connecticut Avenue. The aims and accomplishments of the society were announced as the general's topic for discussion at the ball.

Plans for the ball were discussed at the headquarters yesterday by Gen. Pratt, Mrs. Neville Butler, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, president, British War Relief Society; Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Roger Makins and Eric T. Langford, patrons for the event.

OPEN LETTER

TO THE

SENATE of the UNITED STATES

Permit me to submit for your consideration some observations on the Lend-Lease Bill now under debate.

This Bill is demonstrably as Tory in its conception as it is obviously Tory in purpose. That it confers despotic powers upon the President is indisputable.

It is indeed the logical sequel of the President's veto of the Logan-Walter Bill—a veto, be it said, which saved an arrogant bureaucracy from a review by the courts of its arbitrary usurpations of executive and legislative power.

A dispassionate examination of the provisions of the Lend-Lease Bill makes it clear that it will subject the American people to an exercise of executive authority utterly foreign to our Constitution.

Who can deny that it will give rise to the creation of a multitude of new offices "to harass our people and eat out their substance"? This Bill, in effect, though not in words, repeals an infinite number of our laws and under the conditions it will create, it is to be expected that every agency of our Government will be utterly subservient to the will of the President.

What is the purpose of the Lend-Lease Bill? Ostensibly introduced to promote our National Defense, this Bill in fact merges our destiny with that of the British Empire.

This Bill, in short, repeals the Declaration of Independence, repudiates every admonition of George Washington for the conduct of our foreign relations and makes Toryism triumphant under the cloak of lip service to democracy.

In conclusion, Senators, I venture to suggest that the Lend-Lease Bill underwrites bankruptcy abroad, foreshadows it at home, and maybe dedicates a multitude of our sons to misery or to death in another fruitless war.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN B. TREVOR, President,

March Quotas Set for D. C. Draft Boards

Washington Selective Service headquarters last night announced the quotas each Capital local board must furnish between March 3 and 10 to supply a total of 1,100 men from the District.

Meanwhile, the names of 12 more selectees who will go into uniform Monday, representatives of local Board No. 5, were made public as the February induction got under way in Baltimore.

Forty-nine colored registrants from the District went through induction physical examinations at Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory but only 38 passed the tests and were sworn-in for a year's Army service. The 38 arrived at Fort George G. Meade, Md., reception center last night.

In a development on the national draft scene, Dr. L. G. Roundtree, chief of Medical Service for the Selective Service System, announced a dental board of five, including three District men, to serve as advisory to the national medical staff.

The dental board, formed because of the large percentage of men failing selection examinations because of dental defects, is composed of Dr. C. Willard Camalier, chairman; Dr. Sterling V. Mead, and Brig. Gen. Cole C. Fairbank, Army Medical Corps, all of Washington; Dr. William N. Hodgkin, of Warrenton, Va., and Dr. J. Benjamin Robinson, dean of the Maryland University Dental School.

The quotas to go into uniform from Washington's 25 local boards in March are: Board No. 1, 45; No. 2, 100; No. 3, 50; No. 4, 100; No. 5, 100; No. 6, 50; No. 7, 75; No. 8, 47; No. 9, 50; No. 10, 0; No. 11, 7; No. 12, 0; No. 13, 5; No. 14, 50; No. 15, 2; No. 16, 50; No. 17, 44; No. 18, 50; No. 19, 0; No. 20, 100; No. 21, 0; No. 22, 75; No. 23, 0; No. 24, 100, and No. 25, 0.

A total of 158 selectees will be sworn in at Camp Lee, Va., on March 3, while 157 Washingtonians will go into service each day from March 4 to 10, inclusive.

Names of the 12 selectees ordered sworn in Monday, along with 11 others yet to be named are: Godfrey C. Pasha, 920 Delafield Place Northwest; James F. Donohue, 317 Allison Street Northwest; Socrates Larca, 4607 Georgia Avenue Northwest; James Oleland, 5040 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest; Alexander J. 21 Women, 7 From Washington, Chosen Hostesses for Third Corps Area Camps

Twenty-one women—seven of them residents of Washington—were announced yesterday as successful candidates for the coveted posts of hostesses at seven Army camps in the Third Corps Area.

Chosen from a list of more than 2,500 applicants, they will live in guest houses at the camps and will be called to duty when facilities at their respective stations are completed, according to Maj. Gen Walter S. Grant, of Baltimore, Third Corps Area commandant.

Gen. Grant announced the assignment of a senior hostess and two junior hostesses to each camp. Seniors, to be paid $2,100 annually, will have charge of all hostess activities. At $1,620 a year, one junior will direct entertainment and social activities and the other will be in charge of the cafeteria to be run in connection with the hostess and guest house.

Selected from Washington were: Seniors, Sylvia S. Shattuck, 1548 Forty-fourth Street Northwest; Alice B. Johnson, 2000 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, and Helen E. Becker, 2025 I Street Northwest; juniors, Gladys C. Davis, 2019 Thirty-eighth Street Southeast; Genevieve Hazle, 1726 M Street Northwest; Della Lee Riley, 1125 Twelfth Street Northwest, and Mary Hurst, 1301 Euclid Street Northwest.

11 Years an "Army Wife"

Mrs. Shattuck, who will be senior hostess at Indiantown Gap, Pa., is Washington zone manager of Beauty Counselors, a Detroit cosmetic firm, but she describes Army life as "the only thing I am really fitted for."

Born in Manila, Philippine Islands, she is the widow of Capt. Amos Blanchard Shattuck, U. S. Army Engineers. She spent 11 years as an "Army wife" and has a 16-year-old son now preparing for West Point. He will be a fourth generation Army man, on the paternal side of his family.

After attending Rosemary Hall, at Greenwich, Conn., and Packer Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn, Mrs. Shattuck returned to the Philippines to continue her study of voice and engage in amateur dramatics.

As an Army wife, she was active in amateur dramatics and music at various posts and in churches.

For the last seven years Mrs. Shattuck has lived in Washington.

Mrs. Johnson, who will go to Camp Lee, Va., as senior hostess, is a native of Leesville, S. C., and has lived in Washington since 1934.

Unemployed at present, she was formerly connected with the HOLC and later was field representative of the FHA.

The job will be nothing new for Mrs. Becker, named senior hostess at Fort Story, Va. She was a junior Army hostess in the World War at Camp Meade, Md., and at Fort McHenry, Baltimore.

Widow of Lieut. Comdr. Leon W. Becker, United States Navy, who died here in 1934, Mrs. Becker lives in Washington with her mother and son. For five years, until 1939, she was a contact worker on the staff of American Legion National Headquarters, where her duties included presentation of claims to the Veterans' Bureau.

Before her marriage, she was a social worker and served for some time at Evergreen, blind veterans home in Baltimore. She is a native of Baltimore.

Miss Hazle, to be junior cafeteria hostess at Indiantown Gap, resigned February 1 as dietician hostess of Allies Inn. For three months last summer she was social hostess at the Congressional Country Club.

Miss Hazle was born 31 years ago at Loveland, Colo., where her father, a retired police officer and FBI special investigator, lives. She holds an A. B. degree in voice from the University of Nebraska and an A. B. in speech from the University of Denver. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Social Sorority.

Mrs. Gladys C. Davis will go to Fort George G. Meade, Md., as junior cafeteria hostess, where she hopes her son, who has received his Selective Service questionnaire, will also be stationed. Twice widowed, Mrs. Davis has been connected with the Department of Agriculture Welfare Association for eight years, engaged in cafeteria work.

A native of Leonardtown, Md., she came to Washington at an early age.

Miss Della Riley, for ten years a hotel and night club hostess in major Eastern cities, will go to Camp Lee, Va., as junior hostess.

An attractive brunette, Miss Riley is a native of near Lexington, Ky. For the last two years she hostessed at Raleigh Hotel's Pall Mall, served in the same capacity before that at the local Mayfair Club, as well as at hotels and clubs in New York and Pittsburgh.

Last night Miss Riley was a little surprised at the news of her appointment. She said, modestly, that she had an interview at Third Corps Area headquarters last month, but didn't think anything would come of it.

Miss Hurst will go to Fort Story, Va., as junior cafeteria hostess.

Other Assignments

Other appointments and assignments for the Third Corps Area were announced as:

Fort George G. Meade, Md.—Senior, Jean Warner, Baltimore; junior entertainment, Rob Nesbitt, Hampton, Va.

Indiantown Gap, Pa.—Junior entertainment, Lynne Carroll, Pittsburgh, Pa.

2,000 Virginia Guardsmen Reach Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Feb. 19.—Three long troop trains rolled into Fort Meade today and unloaded more than 2,000 Virginians along a windswept railway siding.

The balance of Virginia's more than 5,500 Guardsmen in the Twenty-ninth Division will move into camp tomorrow with arrival of the 116th Infantry and the 111th Field Artillery. The Infantry companies, four of which came in today with elements of the 176th, will arrive by train; the Field Artillery will make the trip by road.

Also due in tomorrow are the 110th Field Artillery, of Pikesville, Md., and the 176th Field Artillery (155 millimeter howitzers), of Pennsylvania. The 110th will come over by road, while the 176th's 70 vehicles and 24 big guns will come in convoy and most of the officers and men of the regiment by train.

The Richmond Light Infantry Blues, comprising the First Battalion of the 176th Infantry, due at 11:10 a. m. today, were delayed an hour and a half when their train stalled on a hill near Bowie, Md. Finally pulling into the little siding at Admiral, Md., at 12:30, the troops marked down for future reference the fact that the short haul from Washington to Meade had required only 20 minutes less than 2 hours and 50 minutes between Richmond and Washington.

Leaving details with the cars to unload baggage, the Richmonders, who included Company H, 176th, as well as the Blues, went by truck and afoot to their barracks, a mile and a half away.

At 2 p. m. the second battalion, comprising companies from Hopewell, Blackstone and Petersburg and the band and medical detachments, both from Petersburg, arrived. With them were four companies of the 116th Infantry, E, of Chase City; F, of South Boston; G, of Farmville, and M, of Emporia.

These troops, quickly forming alongside the train, marched to their camp and went into barracks. Company L, of Newport News, arrived at 4 p. m., and the remainder of the regiment, Norfolk and Eastern Shore companies, are due tomorrow and Friday.

Contrary to first fears, the regiment will be quartered in the section of the Eighty-eighth Infantry Brigade area planned for it in the beginning. Many companies, though, will spend their first few weeks in camp in barracks other than those they will occupy permanently.

With concentration of the division completed this week, it will step out at 7:30 a. m. Monday on an intensive 13-week program of training calculated to put its men in mental and physical shape for the long period of combat training to follow. Each regiment will follow a prescribed course of training and schools will be set up for instruction of officers and men in all special functions of a fighting force.

Contractor, Now in U. S. Job, Will Forego Defense Profits

Francis Blossom, member of the War Department's Construction Advisory Committee, yesterday informed the House Military Affairs Committee that he will not share in the 1940 or 1941 profits of his New York construction firm, which holds an $11,564,000 contract for building a shell-loading plant near Elwood, Ill.

Blossom, who is drawing $6,500 a year for his advisory work in the Quartermaster General's office, repeated his statement to the committee last week that he did not participate in any way in the award of the ordnance contract to Sanderson & Porter, of which he is a partner.

Blossom was questioned at length by the committee last week about the contract which his company obtained for construction of the shell-loading plant. At that time Chairman May, of Kentucky, said a full investigation of the War Department's contract letting would be made.

Blossom said yesterday he was convinced after consulting counsel that he was entitled to participate in the firm's profits but had decided to forego such participation so there should not be "theslightest question" as to his position while he also was drawing a Government salary.

The partnership agreement of Sanderson and Porter is being amended to provide that he can continue as a member of the firm, subject to a partner's liabilities, without sharing in any profits, Blossom said. He added that he had a "sentimental" desire to continue as a partner in the firm with which he had been associated 42 years.

Chairman May made public Blossom's statement together with a letter from Undersecretary of War Patterson expressing appreciation for the 70-year-old contractor's "patriotic, loyal and effective services."

Patterson wrote that a "careful check" confirmed Blossom's statement that he had no part in the contract award to Sanderson & Porter.

Blossom was careful to advise the War Department at the time of his appointment and again when the Elwood contract was under consideration that he was a member of the Sanderson & Porter firm, Patterson stated.

House Unit to Call Phillips in Army Criticism Case

The House Military Affairs Committee decided yesterday to call Lieut. Col. Thomas R. Phillips before it for an explanation of a magazine article criticizing the Army high command.

Phillips, a staff officer in Puerto Rico, wrote in the Infantry Journal that the United States might have to pay in "needless dead" for failure to modernize its equipment and tactics prior to the emergency. He blamed "conservatives and traditionalists" in policy-making posts for lags.

Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, brought the matter to the attention of the committee. It was decided also to call ranking officials for comment on Phillips' charges.

Meat from these animals has been reported prepared in various stages, one method being to grind and mix it with linseed oil. Some also has been canned. Food control bureau agents have arrested a merchant accused of adulterating flour with gypsum.

Carderock Wind Tunnell Bill Passed

The House yesterday approved expansion of the David W. Taylor ship-model basin at Carderock, Md., to equip it for research in aircraft as well as warship construction.

An overwhelming voice vote gave endorsement to the building of a $300,000 wind tunnel with necessary buildings and equipment for testing aircraft models at Carderock, after an attempt was made to eliminate the project from a pending naval public works authorization bill.

Representative Thom (Democrat), of Ohio, offered the amendment to strike out the wind tunnel, contending it would be an "unnecessary duplication" of aircraft research facilities at Langley Field, Va., and Sunnyvale, Calif. He recalled that the House Appropriations Committee had rejected a similar proposal to make Carderock an air research center three years ago.

"It is just that kind of false economy that has crippled national defense in the past," Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Committee, replied. "If we had provided this wind tunnel in 1937, we'd have better warplanes today."

The House passed the bill after approving the expansion of the local experimental plant and sent it to the Senate. House leaders, however, plan to put through an emergency appropriation for the construction projects carried in the measure within a few days, without waiting for the Senate to act.

California's Barring Of Indgients Assailed

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court was told yesterday that the United States "maybe converted into 48 economic concentration camps" if California legislation prohibiting anyone from assisting non-resident indigent persons to come into the State is upheld.

A brief filed by counsel for Fred F. Edwards, of Marysville, Calif., added that the statute unconstitutionally "denies to the poor man the protection of the laws which it grants to the rich man."

Board Asks Funds for 3 Negro Schools

The need of deficiency appropriations for new school buildings was coupled with a blast at the deterioration of old buildings because of inadequate repair funds at a meeting of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon.

The board voted to request deficiency appropriations of $710,000 for three colored schools, an undisclosed amount for three sites, and $22,080 for 30 colored teachers to relieve overcrowded classes.

Criticism of the inadequate repair program was precipitated when Dr. James A. Gannon, board member, reported on the potential danger and dilapidation which he said he had discovered at Western High School, Thirty-fifth and R Streets Northwest. On a recent inspection of the school, he said, he was told that the roof had leaked for 15 years. The dampness of the plaster and cement constituted a hazard, he declared.

The board adopted his resolution to ask "the proper authorities of the District" whether the building is safe for occupancy and to ask when the building would be put in good condition.

J. J. Crane, first assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, said he would stake his professional reputation on the fact that there was no danger at the school. He said the leak was not in the roof proper, but in the side walls.

Situation "Grows Worse"

Crane indicated that the board should be in a position to "demand," rather than merely to request action from the District repair shop.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, said that "the amount of appropriations for taking care of buildings is inadequate. The old buildings are being allowed to become dilapidated. And the situation is growing worse and worse each year."

In the request for deficiency appropriations for colored schools, the largest items was $300,000 for beginning construction on a new junior high school in the Northeast to relieve overcrowding at Browne Junior High and to keep pace with new housing developments in that vicinity. The request also embodied additional funds for purchase of land in the vicinity of Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place Northeast for construction of this school.

Other items in the deficiency requests were $230,000 for construction of an eight-room addition to Van Ness Elementary School and additional funds for purchase of a site on adjoining grounds; $180,000 for an eight-room extensible elementary school building in the vicinity of Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets Northeast, with additional funds for the site. Both of these locations are near new housing projects which would overtax existing facilities, according to the report from Dr. Ballou.

Fewer School Accidents

Contending that the oversized classes in colored junior and senior high schools make a serious situation, Dr. Ballou recommended the request for deficiency appropriation for 30 additional teachers at a cost of $22,080, which the board supported.

The accident report for the past year showed 267 in elementary schools, 200 in junior high and vocational schools, and 124 in senior high schools. The board received the report from Boise L. Bristor, statistician, covering a range from bruises and cuts to serious injuries.

The totals represented an increase of 12 in elementary schools compared with the previous year, a decrease of 119 in junior high and vocational schools, and a decrease of 20 in senior high schools. Most of the accidents occurred on the school grounds; many when "large groups of children played unsupervised."

Starlets Win Movie Contracts

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

THEIR LUCKY DAY—Bettye Avery (top), 18-year-old model, who recently announced her engagement to Orin Lehman, nephew of New York's Governor, and Juanita Stark (lower), 20, Hollywood's latest "find," both received court approval in Los Angeles yesterday of movie contracts. Miss Stark, a jobless waitress until yesterday, will start to work at Warner Bros. for $50 a week. Miss Avery will start with Twentieth Century-Fox at $75 a week.

Miss Thompson Speaks Tonight On War Crisis

Dorothy Thompson, Post political commentator and advocate of the aid-to-Britain policy, will speak on "America's Responsibility in the World Crisis" at 8 p. m. today in Constitution Hall.

The sponsors yesterday sought some prominent isolationist to oppose the views of Miss Thompson, in line with the practice of presenting both sides of controversial questions, but late yesterday had not extended an invitation.

Questions, in any event, will be permitted from the audience. To facilitate this, several microphones will be installed in the auditorium aisles.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Town Hall sponsor since its establishment and twice a guest speaker, will preside tonight.

This meeting originally was scheduled for last Sunday at the Shoreham Hotel, but advance seat reservations indicated a crowd such as only Constitional Hall might accommodate in Washington, it was stated.

High ranking diplomats from at least ten Embassies and Legations, Government officials and social leaders were among those making reservations, it was announced by Leo J. Paulin, 3033 Sixteenth Street Northwest, executive secretary.

Three Are Held For Grand Jury In File Thefts

Charged with removing personnel records from files of the Civil Service Commission, three men were held for action of the grand jury by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage after a preliminary hearing yesterday.

The defendant's were bound over to the grand jury when a representative of the commission testified that employes had been warned the records were "strictly confidential."

The men held were Harlan W. Crandall, 29, Civil Service worker under suspension, who was charged with taking the records, and two brothers, Lawrence Haynes, 29, and Wallace H. Haynes, 26, operators of the Standard Business Service, 427 Tenth Street Northwest.

The brothers are alleged to have used the records to compile mailing lists to be sold to commercial houses for circularization purposes.

Ross Pollack, representing the Civic Service Commission, told Commissioner Turnage the files were designed to show the special aptitude of Government workers for defense program jobs. The fact the files were in possession of the defendants, he said, showed they were removed illegally.

Two special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation testified concerning the arrests of the suspects and stated that 21,290 individual files containing personnel information had been recovered when the men were taken into custody last month.

Through their attorneys, James O'Shea and Harold Garvey, the defendants declined to make any statements at the hearing. Crandall and Lawrence Haynes were ordered held under $1,000 bail each, while $500 was asked for the release of Wallace Haynes.

Bomber En Route To Britain Crashes In Texas, Killing 2

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 19 (AP).—A Hudson bombing plane, en route from Burbank, Calif., for delivery to the British Air Force, struck a radio tower during a high wind and crashed today, killing both pilots.

The pilots, Marino Guglielmetti and Robert McKee, both employes of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, were thrown clear of the ship before it burst into flames and was destroyed.

An announcement at Burbank by Robert Gross, president of Lockheed, said:

"So far as could be learned, the accident was the result of the pilot failing to see the radio mast and evidently did not result from any failure of the airplane."

William MacDowell Answers Last Call

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 19 (AP).—William Melbourne MacDowell, matinee idol of the gay nineties and a star of the early silent motion picture days, died today in the Masonic Home at Decoto. He was 84.

He rose to stardom on Broadway after he married Actress Fanny Davenport. MacDowell said he first saw Miss Davenport in New York as she boarded a horse-drawn streetcar. He was so thrilled at the sight of her that he cut a cross with a cold chisel in the pavement on the spot where she stood, and began a year's courtship culminating in marriage.

Dr. Ciechanowski Arrives in D. C. As Polish Envoy

Dr. Jan Ciechanowski, new Ambassador from the Polish government in exile, arrived here yesterday to take up his official duties.

Ciechanowski

Until recently he was undersecretary of foreign affairs for the Polish government in London. From 1925 to 1929 he served as Minister to the United States.

He succeeds Count Jerzy Potocki who resigned last December. Count Potocki returned to Washington recently from a trip to Peru.

Early Hearing Promised on D. C. Suffrage

Early public hearings will be held on the Capper-Sumners suffrage resolution, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said last night following his appointment as chairman of a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Other members of the subcommittee named yesterday by Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, are: Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas; Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico; Norris (Independent), of Nebraska; and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

Senator McCarran declined to state his personal opinion of the legislation in view of his designation as chairman of the subcommittee.

"Everyone who is interested will be given a chance to testify," he said.

McCarran indicated that the hearings may be scheduled shortly after Senate disposition of the lend-lease bill.

Meanwhile, Senator Connally, apprised of his appointment, said he might favor local suffrage but not national representation.

The resolution seeks to empower Congress to extend either franchise to the residents of the District with the condition that the privilege could be withdrawn at any time.

24 Surgical Tool Makers Indicted As Price-Fixers

Philadelphia, Feb. 19 (AP).—Twenty-four surgical instrument manufacturing companies, the American Surgical Trade Association and 12 individuals were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of conspiring to fix prices in violation of the Antitrust Act.

The indictments charged that those named, through membership in the association, controlled the sale of approximately 95 per cent of all surgical supplies.

The defendants are charged specifically with conspiring to limit and prevent the production and sale of surgical supplies which were imitations or copies. This was accomplished, the indictments allege, by adopting a registration plan under which any member of the association could register any article which was first produced by a member. Then they agreed, the indictments added, that no other member would produce or sell this item or any imitation for five years.

Sculptor Epstein Puts Art To Work in Britain's Behalf

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Feb. 19.—A bronze of the head, shoulders and outstretched arms of a baby, modeled in London under the influence of the blitzkrieg, has been sent here on behalf of the bombed babies of Britain by Jacob Epstein, whose work for the last 30 years has moved some critics to call him the greatest sculptor who ever lived, and has moved others to mutilate some of his public monuments in rage.

The bronze, a realistic study of Epstein's granddaughter Leda, was completed in his studio in Hyde Park Gate, where a bomb had blown out all the windows, and was sent here in custody of Edith Lutyens, niece of Sir Edwin Landseer Lutyens, president of the Royal Academy and designer of the Cenotaph in Whitehall that honors the empire dead of the first World War.

Miss Lutyens set the bronze up today in the apartment of an acquaintance, prepared to sell it as best she might and give the proceeds to any British organization working for the bombed babies of Britain. The British War Relief Society summoned an art connoisseur to advise them, and immediately expressed interest.

Meanwhile, Miss Lutyens recounted the impulsive donation of the bronze by Epstein, on the eve of her departure from London, when she called to say goodby to his daughter, Peggy Jean, an old family friend.

"I was talking to Epstein's wife," said Miss Lutyens, "about the importance of having it understood in America that artists were still working in London and that culture was not bombed to blazes. I looked at the baby on the studio shelf and said it was a most appealing thing. The Americans would understand if they could see it.

"She immediately said, 'I must go to see Jacob.' He came back himself and said, 'Here you are, Edith. I give it to you and you can do what you like with it. Do the best for everybody.' I asked him exactly what he meant. He said, 'I don't want anything out of it. If you can get money for the children of England with it, there is nothing that would please me more.'

"So there I was with a bare bronze baby in my arms and a dinner engagement in Jermyn Street and the night boat train to catch for Liverpool. I checked the baby with my wraps during dinner and when I came out with my friends there was a terrific air raid going on.

"The blitz was quite strong and the guns were cracking off and shrapnel was whizzing about.

"It took 11 hours to get to Liverpool and we arrived in a complete blackout. As I sat in the train in the dark, someone came in with a dim electric torch. I couldn't see who was behind it, but I heard a woman's screech as she fainted. She was brought to on the seat opposite me and when she saw the baby again she burst into tears. She said it struck her as so lifelike and yet only half a child, that she thought she had gone quite mad at last.

"I couldn't get a taxicab to take my luggage so I hailed a food lorry and asked the driver to take me down to the Cunard-White Star dock. He said he had food to deliver and couldn't do it. I told him it was a matter of national importance. Then the man said, 'All right, but first you'll have to help me unload the sausage.' So I unloaded sausage with him about three-quarters of an hour."

Nazis May Not Have to Fight For Balkans

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 19.—It is increasingly indicated that Germany hopes to accomplish a bloodless conquest of the Balkans this spring and is well on the way to success.

Rumors continue to circulate—largely instigated by German sources—that Bulgaria will be occupied by a Nazi army during the next few days. Naturally, there is no confirmation of this.

News from Turkey indicates that Ankara's desire to keep out of active conflict overbalances any other sentiment, and, particularly in the light of the new Turkish-Bulgarian pact, it would seem unlikely that Turkey would attack Bulgaria if the Nazis move in.

In the light of these indications it might be interesting to recall that the Turkish foreign minister, Sukru Saracoglu, in a conversation with the writer 11 months ago said Turkey would fight if Italy entered the war, or if a member country of the Balkan Entente were attacked. Both events have occurred. Turkey has not reacted.

Yugoslavia is apparently playing for German encirclement, which would obviate the necessity of fighting. It seems to be coming. Hitler indicated to Dragisha Cvetkovitch and Dr. Alexander Cincar-Markovitch, Yugoslav premier and foreign minister, respectively, that this country's neutrality would be emphatically welcomed and informed them that further Balkan frontier revision was necessary.

That Bulgaria—still dreaming of the 1878 borders—is also aware of Hitler's concept is clear. The Sofia press once more talked today of the need for an Aegean outlet.

Yugoslavia and Turkey are still the toughest nuts to crack and if Hitler can break these countries down, Greece is virtually doomed. With Nazi troops on the Rhodope Mountains the Greeks will be so menaced that it will be difficult for them to repel the expected Fascist counter-attacks through Pogradec and Koritza. Hitler has apparently now finally determined to pull his unhappy ally out of a hole.

Turkey is falling slowly into a more neutral position, although it, like Yugoslavia, would fight if directly attacked. Franz von Papen, the German ambassador to Turkey, is apparently meeting with success in his policy of alternate threats and blandishments.

Turks Charge Axis Misinterprets Pact

the Turkish-Bulgarian declaration should be credited to the Axis are untrue—it is the beginning of a new Balkan Entente.

Nevertheless, heavy movements of German war supplies across Yugoslav railways, headed for Bulgaria, were reported during the day.

Turks Protest to Sofia

Budapest, Feb. 19 (INS).—Turkish Minister Sevki Berker tonight protested to the Bulgarian foreign office against articles in the controlled Bulgarian press asserting that Turkey has withdrawn from her obligations to Greece.

At the same time in Sofia Premier Bogdan Philoff told the Bulgarian Parliament that the new pact with Turkey "does not change Bulgaria's foreign policy." He emphasized that Bulgaria has no intention of attacking or even threatening any of her neighbors.

The congregation of First Congregational Church will hold its second annual Federal dinner tonight at 6:15 in the parish hall at Tenth and G Streets Northwest. Members of the church and others engaged in Government service are invited to attend. Following the dinner Mrs. Howard Beresford will give a dramatic presentation, "Family Portrait," in the church auditorium. Newcomer to the church, she is a talented actress from Denver, Colo.

U. S. Battleship Washington to Join Fleet in the Fall

The Navy announced yesterday that the battleship Washington will be placed in full commission, May 15, and join the fleet next September, more than two months ahead of schedule.

BENSON

At the same time, it was stated, that Capt. Howard H. J. Benson, now stationed in Annapolis, will be given command of the new dreadnaught. Benson is the son of the late Admiral William S. Benson, World War chief of naval operations, whose widow makes her home here.

The Washington will be the second battleship to be completed by the Navy since 1923. The first will be the North Carolina, scheduled for commission April 11. Both vessels displace 35,000 tons and carry nine 16-inch guns in three turrets. They are 704 feet long, have a rated speed of 27 knots, and carry three planes.

Tuberculosis Group Drops Formation Idea

The task of reorganizing the District Tuberculosis Association was given up yesterday by a committee appointed to consider the problem.

In a statement signed by Ross Garrett, chairman; Dr. Watson W. Eldridge and Williard C. Smith, the committee said "there is no possibility of making any report or taking any action which amounts even approximately to a satisfactory solution."

The committee declared "it feels that it can no longer use its authority to suppress any answers from any source."

Pointing out that the association "throughout its entire existence has done a splendid service for the community," the committee added, "It appears, however, that the association can not make further desirable changes without criticism from some capable and estimable sources."

All information collected was turned back to the board of directors and all authority as a committee surrendered. "The exercise of freedom of speech by all individuals concerned according to the dictates of their respective judgments and consciences," was urged.

G. W. U. Opens Cherry Blossom Fund Campaign

More than 100 George Washington University students yesterday defied subfreezing winds which swept across their campus to participate in outdoor ceremonies dedicating the university's newly-planted cherry tree and open the three-day cherry blossom drive to finance special scholarships.

Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the school, commended "members of this frozen assembly" for helping to open the drive, sponsored nationally by the Masonic order. He introduced Melville D. Hensey, national chairman of the drive, now in its third year.

Codirector Helen Sarstarphen, of the campus committee, urged all students to buy 10-cent cherry blossom, being sold by sorority girls to further the scholarship drive.

The university band, directed by Leon Brusiloff, played under difficulties, caused mainly by gloves and high winds. The sole coed member, Miss Marcia Crocker, appeared in overcoat, ski slacks and a band leader's hat.

Meanwhile the Student Club was doing a thriving business in hot coffee and cherry blossom pins. The drive will continue until Saturday, Washington's birthday.

Sen. Overton Offers Revised Fiscal Formula

The rapid growth of the National Capital and the expansion of Federal activities under the national defense program are making increasing demands upon the District government which should be paid for, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, said yesterday in introducing his revised fiscal formula.

A companion bill, which would provide a Federal payment of $9,000,000 on the basis of present 1942 budget estimates, was introduced in the House simultaneously by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio.

"Municipal services granted the Federal Government by the District have increased rapidly for several years," Overton said. Recently, under the huge defense program, the various Government agencies have been stepped up tremendously.

"As a result the District Government has been called upon more and more for additional services, causing a continuous increase in the city's budget.

"I believe, therefore, that the Federal Government's payment to the District should keep step with the demands made upon the municipality by the national agencies."

Senator Overton called attention to the fact that the District furnishes water free of charge to Government agencies and free education to Government workers residing in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The District builds and maintains streets abutting Federal property he continued, and provides street lighting on them.

Hunter said the fiscal formula would be considered next Tuesday in connection with the executive meeting of the House fiscal subcommittee on District taxes.

Collect Cables To Hitler Out, He's 'Bad Pay'

Washington officials of two large American telegraph and cable companies—Western Union and Postal Telegraph—stated yesterday their offices are not accepting collect messages to Adolf Hitler because of "some skepticism" about Der Fuehrer's willingness to pay.

An official of the Washington office of the Radio Corporation of America, which is relaying messages to Berlin, refused to divulge the number or content of messages sent from here. His refusal followed a statement by J. B. Rostrom, traffic manager of R. C. A. in New York, that publication of the facts is against the practice of the company.

"A good number" was the only comment the local official would make on the total sent from the District. "We could still handle more though," he added.

Throughout many other sections of the Nation, particularly in New York, the German government's broadcast offer to accept collect messages from American listeners on the type of radio programs they would like to hear, appeared to be receiving wide response.

An employe of one telegraph firm which refused to accept messages to Hitler sent a cable through R. C. A. It read:

"Sing 'Far, Far Away,'" and was signed, "Bunch of Dam Yankees."

The message was apparently typical of those sent from this country.

Must Move South, Nomura Asserts

slap their thighs and prepare an answer.

The closest that Nomura came to saying that Japanese-American relations were something less than rosy was a statement at the start that he found the "atmosphere in Washington not quite so good as I expected when I was in Japan. I thought it would not be so bad."

"Do you believe there is a danger of war between the United States and Japan," Nomura was asked.

"Personally I believe that there should not be war, and there will not be war," he replied. "But of course that is my personal opinion."

"Can there be any commercial equality in Asia in view of Japan's program?" was the next question.

"I belive that eventually, when peace and normal conditions are restored in China, it will be quite possible to restore normal policies and guarantees to United States commerce," Nomura said. "Of course at present there are military controls. Without these controls it would be impossible to carry out our operations. It is inevitable that there will be certain cases of impairing third-power interests. But this is merely temporary."

Queried on Guam

Asked if Japan objected to strengthening by the United States of Guam and Samoa, voted yesterday by the House, Nomura replied:

"Of course from the Japanese side we don't like to see an air or naval base so near our territory, especially a base of a great power like the United States.

"But we can not interfere."

Asked if he had any objection to British reinforcements arriving at Singapore, the Japanese envoy replied similarly: "Singapore doesn't concern us. It is a British base."

Asked whether he had brought with him any concrete suggestions for improving relations, Nomura replied that "I can not answer that."

"Do you think Japan will have to expand her territory some more in order to establish this new order?" the Ambassador was asked.

"No," he replied—in English.

Regarding current activities in Indo-China and Thailand he said:

"Indo-China and Thailand have special reference to the China war. The main object of Japan there is economic, an exchange of goods." He explained that his country is interested chiefly in making sure that no war supplies get into China from Indo-China or Thailand.

Nomura was asked "will Japan extend her relations with the Axis?"

"There is a treaty and Japan will stick to it," he said.

"If the United States goes to war against Germany would Japan declare war on the United States?" was the next stickler.

"I don't think the United States will declare war against Germany, so the situation you refer to will not arise," Nomura answered.

"Does the treaty obligate Japan to go to war against the United States if the United States goes to war against Germany?, the envoy was asked.

"That is a question of treaty interpretation; I will refrain from going into it," he said cautiously.

Then he volunteered the following:

"When Japan entered upon the Axis treaty it was her intention to preserve the peace. Her motives were entirely peaceful. We wanted to avoid war with the United States."

Asked for comment on a statement by Undersecretary of State Welles Tuesday that Japan should express her intentions in deeds, not words, the Japanese Ambassador said:

"That remark by Mr. Welles may mean some criticism against Japan or some other country. Japan sincerely tries to carry out her words."

The press conference broke up when a reporter asked whether the Japanese Ambassador believed "the Roosevelt Administration is trying to get the United States into a war."

"I'll ask you," said Admiral Nomura, laughing heartily.

Nomura was characterized recently by President Roosevelt as an old friend.

The woman is desperately ill of the rare disease, streptococcus veridans septicemia endocarditis. The Variety Club of Charlotte asked the Washington club for aid.

D. C. Doctors 'Stampeded,' U. S. Charges

Association and two smaller groups, is on trial for violation of the Sherman Act. Dr. West, one of the 20 doctors indicted by name, is secretary and general manager of the A. M. A.

The local physician's bluntly worded letter, subpenaed with hundreds of others by the prosecution, started a chain of events in which "trouble-shooters" were rushed here from Chicago headquarters of the A. M. A., medical associates disagreed with one another as to what to do and, in short—according to the Government's interpretation—the doctors opposed to Group Health Association found themselves up in the air.

Scarcely had Dr. Herbst's letter been received than:

The A. M. A. board of trustees held a meeting and, disturbed by the news from Washington, ordered Dr. William C. Woodward and Dr. R. G. Leland to the Capital to "trouble shoot" for the local medical society.

Even before this development, however, Dr. Woodward had obtained a first-hand description of the local situation from Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, a District Medical Society leader. The latter told Dr. Woodward he thought the organized doctors should try to "go along" with G. H. A., but the "trouble shooter" did not favor cooperation.

Drs. Woodward and Leland are among the individual defendants on trial. The former was director of the A. M. A. Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation at the time of the alleged conspiracy to stifle Group Health Association and Dr. Leland was, and is, director of medical economics. Dr. Verbrycke was not among the 20 individuals named in the indictment.

"I suggested to Dr. Verbrycke," said Dr. Woodward, in a confidential memorandum, "that I could not see how they could go along with the association named (G. H. A.) without violating the principles of the A. M. A. His answer was, in effect, that they would try to work out some plan whereby they could do so.

"Cooperatives, he said, were already with us, and the representatives of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia thought it would be better for the society to help to organize cooperatives on an ethical basis rather than oppose the wishes of the association named."

Dr. Woodward told Dr. Verbrycke he thought the Home Owners Loan Corporation officials working to establish G. H. A. were "bluffing."

"We certainly could not cooperate with them," the A. M. A. official told the Washington doctor, according to the memorandum.

In a letter from Dr. Verbrycke to Dr. Francis X. McGovern, one of the 16 Washington defendants, dated July 12, 1937, the writer admitted that the District Medical Society could, if it chose, put up a good fight against G. H. A.

"Any combative methods," he explained, "would necessarily have to be camouflaged to the nth degree."

Wouldn't it be better, though, Dr. Verbrycke asked, to form "our own complete organization for the distribution of prepaid medical care as a distinct unit competitive with any other organization that may be formed?"

This idea, said the writer, had the backing of Dr. West to whom he had just spoken by long distance.

Yet even as this letter was being posted, Dr. West was writing Dr. Verbrycke to say that he'd changed his mind since their telephone conversation and no, it would not be wise for the District Medical Society to organize a prepayment service to compete with G. H. A.

Dr. West said he and Dr. Leland were leaving for Washington to go into the problem further.

Reading to the jury from subpenaed minutes of a special meeting of the society's executive committee on July 12, 1937, Prosecutor John Henry Lewin revealed that Dr. R. Arthur Hooe—another local defendant—warned his colleagues "there's no time to lose," that G. H. A. would be operating in the fall.

It was at this meeting that a "white list" was ordered drafted, whose effect would be to bar District Medical Society members from consulting with anyone on the medical staff of Group Health Association.

"Utmost diplomatic handling is required," Dr. C. B. Conklin, also a defendant, pointed out at the meeting.

Prosecutor Grant W. Kelleher, Lewin's associate from the Department of Justice, read from minutes of another special meeting of the medical society on July 29, 1937, to show that the organized doctors acknowledged the sound motives of GHA's advocates.

"There is no doubt in my mind," Dr. McGovern said on this occasion, "that the lay members of the GHA board of directors are thoroughly convinced that they are doing a splendid thing for their employes. I am further convinced that they are not doing anything that might be considered unethical by them."

Dr. H. C. Macatee, who is not a defendant, contributed: "My feeling is that this is a group of responsible, honest, rather public spirited people who are undertaking to do something for the benefit of their associates in office."

At the morning session yesterday in Justice James M. Proctor's court, the trial entered its third week with the Government presenting letters revealing how hospitals in Milwaukee, Rochester and Washington were induced by the A. M. A. to withdraw courtesy privileges from unorganized doctors.

The five Washington institutions mentioned in this connection were Providence, Georgetown, George Washington, Columbia and Washington Sanitarium.

Fascists Fire on Own Retreating Troops, Greek Say

Athens, Greece, Feb. 19 (AP).—A Greek government spokesman asserted tonight that members of an Italian company retreating on the Albanian front were fired on by their own comrades and forced to return to their line.

The Greeks ousted the Fascists from two fortified villages and took 300 prisoners, including a lieutenant-colonel and six subalterns, and important quantities of materials, the spokesman added.

Three Italian counterattacks were "easily repulsed" with "heavy losses on the enemy," it was announced.

fleet of 600 U-boats always will be hunting."

Many of the new Nazi submarines were described as of the "minnow" type of between 250 and 330 tons.

Since last June Germany was reported to be building U-boats in her own shipyards and those of Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands.

German production, the naval authority said, has been aimed at standardization by which parts for "small, fairly simple" U-boats could be assembled in any shipyard.

He pointed out that two German shipyards, Germania and Deschimag, turned out 10 fairly large seagoing submarines in nine months of 1936 and 1937 "before the Nazis had really organized this industry."

With ports along the Atlantic seaboard from the Arctic Circle to the Bay of Biscay and aircraft-spotting obviating long searches for convoys, the German navy can emphasize construction of smaller types of U-boats.

The small types displace between 250 and 330 tons and carry a complement of 23 men and three 21-inch torpedo tubes. Their surface speed is 13 knots.

Up to now, he asserted, the Germans have employed for the most part ocean-going types of 740 tons, carrying 40 crewmen and six 21-inch torpedo tubes, and other seagoing craft displacing 500 to 517 tons and carrying crews of 35 and the same number of torpedo tubes as the larger one.

The German design for a spring sea campaign is foreseen in German Admiral Wegener's book "Naval Strategy of the World War."

Reviewing World War mistakes, he proposed a "trade war" with "control of communications" as the dominant aims of German naval strategy. These, the admiral wrote, could be accomplished without the intermediary step of a struggle with Britain's larger fleet for general command of the seas.

In line with this, the Germans scrupulously have avoided contact with Britain's home fleet, employing instead submarines and surface raiders against British convoys.

The fear that inefficiency in the control of British merchant shipping might contribute to the possible success of this campaign was seen as behind current calls in the press for a "dictator" of shipping to end the "shipping muddle."

Ronald Cross, mnister of shipping, has been the principal target of these attacks.

Laborite Emanuel Shinwell assailed the Government in the House of Commons today with questions regarding a convoy from which reports abroad said 13 ships were lost and which he asserted "had no protection whatever."

He said these facts "are well enough known to the enemy" and demanded:

"Is it not desirable to expose anything in the nature of deficiencies in order to protect our shipping and merchant seamen?"

"It is in the national interest," he added, "to expose the muddle in shipping."

Other points at which critics are hammering include the small number of ships actually at sea, the placing of fast ships in slow convoys—the slowest ship sets the pace for a convoy—ships held in ports where they are neither discharging nor receiving cargo and delays at docks which expose ships and cargoes to air attack.

instead of five, the present requirement.

3. ASCAP's board of directors will be elected by the membership, instead of being self-perpetuating.

4. ASCAP will permit any member to deal directly for performance rights but will act as the collecting and disbursing agent under its regular schedule of royalties.

By agreeing to a "per program" charge rather than a blanket charge, ASCAP has eliminated the main bone of contention in the war. The broadcasters contended that it was unfair to pay a flat fee on the grounds that many programs did not use music.

On the other hand, it has long been an ASCAP contention that the chains should foot the music bill rather than the individual stations, and the last section of provision "1" makes it appear that this may be done.

The decision to allow songwriters to deal directly for performance rights should satisfy many who have complained that under ASCAP present system, inactive composers annually received more money than many active ones.

Court Criticized In Meter Thefts

Court that they literally defy police to lock them up, Capt. Callahan declared.

He cited one case where a "repeater" was taken into court following his third arrest, escaped again on probation, and the next night was once more in custody for the same offense.

Although the loot is small—sometimes less than 15 cents—methods of gaining entrance to the coin boxes frequently damage the meters beyond repair, Van Duzer said. Usually a sharp instrument is used to force open the meter front and sometimes the glass is broken to get at the money, he added.

The offenders—all white boys between the ages of 10 and 17—apparently work in gangs, it was stated. One young pair—brothers—have been arrested four times, records show. In some instances, those taken into custody freely admit to 10 or more thefts, said Capt. Callahan.

Because on each court appearance the offenders are given "one more chance," police are fearful that the practice will never be broken up and further arrests will be useless.

Maj. Brown has called for a thorough investigation of the situation and plans to confer with Juvenile Court authorities in an effort to solve the problem.

"I am glad the gentleman is paying his respects to these scrubby, contemptible, squint-eyed sons of the rising run."

During the day, the War Department took cognizance of the explosive situation in southern Asia, by dispatching military observers to three key points. It ordered Maj. Clarence E. Jackson to be military attache to Thailand, Maj. Francis G. Brink to be military observer at Singapore, and Lieut. Col. Alexander H. Campbell to be military observer in the Dutch East Indies. All three are now in the Philippines.

Chairman Vinson told the House that "the country and the Congress can understand that all hands in the Navy are on their tip-toes and ready for any emergency that they may be called on to meet."

German Plane Loss in Raids Put at 3,101

By International News Service

London, Feb. 19.—German air raids on England since the beginning of the war have cost the Nazis 3,101 planes and approximately 7,000 aviators, it was authoritatively revealed today.

This staggering toll, it was said, does not include craft brought down by navy vessels and armed merchantmen off the coasts of Britain.

Of the 7,000 German fliers shot down, it was said, fewer than 1,000 are in internment camps. These figures show the Nazi pilot has only about one chance in seven of surviving a crash.

In striking contrast, British losses in and around Britain since the beginning of the war amount to only 851 planes, and of these 427 pilots have been saved, according to the figures.

Tonight as violent antiaircraft fire blazed in the outskirts of London, raid-weary Britons were cheered by the disclosure that Britain now has a crack corps of parachute troops to counter-invade the continent—just in case.

Toughness, tenacity, endurance and skill, the ability to march fast and far with little sleep and little food have been embodied in the picked units to such a remarkable degree that they could—and probably would—be used behind the German continental lines in case of an invasion, to wreck communications and generally cause havoc around the enemy bases.

But as Britain cheerfully pondered the possibilities of these troops, German night raiders dumped high explosives in at least two London districts. Shops were wrecked and a few persons were injured in one section. In another district, high explosives started a fire which was quickly extinguished with little material damage.

Incendiary bombs started several other fires but they were doused by alert watchers before they could cause any great damage.

The raid continued for more than an hour, but subsided shortly before 11 p. m., and the all-clear signal was sounded.

Waves of raiders crossing the southeast coast were met by a heavy barrage of antiaircraft fire and heavy explosions were heard inland.

British night fighters swarmed into the skies to challenge raiders arriving over South Wales. High explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on one coastal town. (Although not identified, the town was probably Cardiff or Swansea.) Other Nazi night raiders were reported over a southwest English town.

Daylight activity was confined principally to attacks on Yorkshire and Lincolnshire.

"Some bombs were dropped," an official air ministry communique stated, "but there was little damage and few casualties."

All volunteers, the parachute troops are the cream of Britain's fighters. They must all pass rigid physical and mental tests—the latter to prove beyond doubt their psychological aptitude for the most dangerous kind of fighting in any man's war.

They must be good swimmers and have the endurance of a long-distance track man. They must have ingenuity and daring, for once dropped behind the enemy lines the will be "on their own."

The volunteer call has brought responses even from generals. One young medical officer, it was said, was called down because he passed a general through the medical tests. The general later was found to be unfit for parachute duty. But in the face of rebuke, the medical officer still had a sense of humor:

"So what," he said. "I'll kill off the old ones so we can get some young leaders."

The new units are dressed in battle clothes, marking them as legitimate fighting units entitled to treatment of regular prisoners of war if they are captured.

New 8-Inch Gun Is Army's 'Big Noise'

British Planes Are Massed At Singapore

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Feb. 19.—British, Australian, Malayan and Indian regiments stood in strength in Malaya tonight, manning the mighty bastion of Singapore to meet any spread of the war in the Pacific, and by bringing in heavy reinforcements of warplanes the British appeared also to have seized the balance of air power in southeastern Asia.

The irrepressible Australians, who arrived yesterday in singing thousands after a 3,000-mile trip under convoy, took up their stations along with fellow imperial troops at every vital position in Malaya and the already mobilized civil defense units—including the Chinese—prepared to do their part.

Maj. Gen. Gordon Bennett, the Australian commander, who brought a wholly-equipped force, dependent upon Malaya only for food and fuel, told the people here that his men were trained shock troops, and added:

"Your war is our war. Should any enemy come this way, Australians will be there!"

"Need Not Cause Anxiety"

Sir Shenton Thomas, governor of the Straits Settlements, said the Australians were here for defense and not attack, and their arrival "need not cause anxiety in any of our neighbors."

"But," he went on, "if attacked we shall fight."

In Tokyo, Japanese observers charged that Britain was trying to create a crisis in the Far East; in Shanghai a Japanese army spokesman described the Australians' arrival at Singapore as "a belligerent action" intended to put pressure on Thailand (Siam), "which is cooperating with Japan in bringing a new order into the Far East."

Japan to Counter With 'Appropriate' Steps

Shanghai (Thursday), Feb. 20 (U.P.). Britain's sensational military moves in Singapore and elsewhere in southeast Asia are part of a joint British-American plan to "strangle Japan" and will be countered with "appropriate measures," Japanese spokesmen said today.

The spokesmen would not say what measures would be taken but they hinted a first effort would be to speed the conclusion of the Tokyo peace conference between Thailand and French Indo-China, so that Japan would be in a position to increase her penetration of Indo-China and Thailand as part of a plan to flank Singapore from the north.

Information here is that the British now have more than 50,000 first line troops in Singapore and Malaya. The British declare that their air strength in Malaya now is strong enough to repel any Japanese aerial attack. This would mean that they must have more than 1,000 planes.

Australia Takes 'Added Precautions'

Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 19 (AP). A. W. Fadden, acting Prime Minister, said tonight that the Cabinet had reviewed Australia's defense system and taken "added precautions against any sudden emergency."

"No action will be taken, no word spoken which would shatter peace in the Pacific," Fadden continued. "If war comes to our front door, it will not be of our choosing.

"But let nobody think we are helpless and unfitted for such a supreme test."

Fadden added that "while desiring peace, Australians do not intend to lower their ideals and standards of living unless neighbors desiring this come here and fight for an alteration.

"At this supreme test for our national existence we must be utterly self-reliant," he continued. Australia's front line is the English Channel.

"The troops landed in Malaya are of the same quality as those who stopped the Italians in Libya and won fame at Gallipoli. Australia is prepared for whatever comes and is confident Britain will win through."

Japanese Warships Reported Massing

Saigon, French Indo-China, (Thursday), Feb. 20 (AP).—Japanese sailors at this South China sea base stayed close to their posts and Japanese officials rushed about in an atmosphere of excitment today, despite professions that nothing was known here about heavy Australian reinforcement of the Singapore base.

Numerous conferences were under way. For hours, military, and civilian officials have been dashing about between hotels where they are living and the Saigon airport, which the Japanese have taken over; the Japanese consulate and the 5,170-ton Japanese cruiser Nagara, which anchored here following two sister ships.

The 30 American business men here, at Haiphong and Hanoi discussed evacuation plans in the event of the development of a greater emergency.

In responsible circles, reports persisted of the operations of Japanese naval units in the Gulf of Siam. These said two separate squadrons of warships were operating in the Siamese Gulf; one off the Menam River, waterway to Bangkok; the other south of the Thai Island of Koh Chang in the gulf.

(It was officially announced at Bangkok that one Japanese destroyer was at the mouth of the river on which Bangkok is situated and that two others were on heir way there, "to take on water and supplies.")

Meanwhile, he Japanese-mediated peace conference between Thailand and French Indo-China has snagged on the question of cession of the Laos section of Indo-China.

British Give Gas Masks To Nazi Prisoners

Patriots Rout 9,000 Italians In Ethiopia

By Philip S. Taylor
United Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Feb. 19.—Ethiopian tribesmen, led by British officers, have driven to within 150 miles of Addis Ababa, capturing Njabara south of Lake Tana and routing 9,000 Italians, including crack Blackshirt units known as "Mussolini's Pride," military dispatches said tonight.

In their greatest victory since the Ethiopian uprising under Haile Selassie's red-green-gold banner, Gojjam warriors were reported barely 50 miles from the big Italian base of Debra Marcos, the gateway to Addis Ababa from the north.

Today's war communique of the British Middle East command announced the capture of Njabara "with many prisoners" and gave full credit for the victory to the Ethiopians.

Second Post Abandoned

The Italians also abandoned their post at Piccolo Abbai, just south of Lake Tana, the source of the Blue Nile, after losing the caravan junction of Danghela, which is 40 miles north of Njabara, the communique said.

The 9,000 Italians routed from Danghela, Piccolo Abbai and Njabara were reported falling back to Addis Ababa by way of Debra Marcos.

Debra Marcos is connected with Addis Ababa by a good motor road and from the Italian base another highway runs northeast into Eritrea where British Empire forces are laying siege to the railroad town of Cheren, just northwest of the Eritrean capital of Asmara.

The Gojjam tribesmen were reported to be pursuing the 9,000 Italian troops deeper into inner Ethiopia, mercilessly attacking them with rifle and machine-gun fire from hills, rocks and trees commanding gorges.

Another British force, including Sudanese native troops, was said to be driving steadily into Ethiopian territory north of Lake Tana.

The British-Sudanese force was pushing toward the important town of Gondar 25 miles north of Lake Tana and 90 miles from Gallabat on the Sudan border.

Meanwhile Britain's South African land and air forces were driving deeper into Ethiopia east of Lake Rudolf in the Mega region. A communique issued at Nairobi, Kenya, reported heavy and widespread R. A. F. aerial attacks on Italian forces steadily falling back before the British blows in both Italian Somaliland and southern Ethiopia.

No mention was made in today's communique of the situation in North Africa.

British Strafed From Air

Rome, Feb. 19 (AP).—Formidable masses of British tanks and armored cars—poised as though for a final thrust into Western Libya—are being assaulted by German dive-bombers, official Italian reports said tonight.

Italians see in the report of the new concentration an indication that the British intend to sweep on into Tripolitania from Cirenaica, the eastern part of Libya, where Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's Imperial Army of the Nile has established itself.

Only the besieged Italian garrison of Giarabub, an oasis town 100 miles inland from the sea, is holding out in Cirenaica.

The Nazi bombing of the mechanized masses was reported to have had "excellent results" and other German bombers were said to have swept over a British base on the North African shore (identified in Berlin as Bengasi), attacking ships in the harbor and the harbor works themselves.

The British forces about Giarabub outnumber the defending garrison by 10 to 1, with constant increases, the Italians say.

The thunder of artillery is heard all day, Italian guns under the palm trees crossing fire with the British batteries in the desert.

The wells of the oasis give the Italians a slight advantage over their besiegers in the desert, but the garrison's only food is dropped by plane, and food is strictly rationed.

Several times the British have penetrated the edge of the oasis, military dispatches said, only to be forced back.

London Drafts Skeptical Reply To Japan's Mediation Offer

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Feb. 19.—As British land, sea and air reinforcements flooded into Singapore, British diplomats today were drafting a communication to Tokyo courteously but skeptically acknowledging receipt of Japan's offer of its services as mediator in the European war.

In the House of Commons R. A. Butler, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, announced that Anthony Eden had received from Yosuke Matsuoka, the Japanese foreign minister, a "special message in courteous terms," and on the same general lines as the statement made by the Japanese official spokesman to the press yesterday.

So far as Tokyo's offer to mediate is concerned, it was suggested here that Japan either had not estimated or had little knowledge of prevailing conditions in Europe brought about by her Axis partners. Britain is not interested in mediators, informed or otherwise.

Diplomatic courtesy, however, demands that Japan's message shall be replied to in kind. Consequently, a special message for delivery to the Japanese Foreign Minister by Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador at Tokyo, is being drafted.

Beneath its diplomatic verbiage this message will probably reflect the conviction held here that Japan's protestations of peaceful intent go ill with such statements as Matsuoka made in the Japanese Lower House yesterday, when he declared that "ultimately diplomacy is force" and urged the Japanese people to demonstrate that they were "determined to establish an east asiatic sphere of common prosperity."

The combination of threats and blandishments with which the Japanese have accompanied the steady progress of their armed forces southward and their consistent pursuit of the South Sea policy, make it difficult for Britain to take Japan's protestations of peaceful intent seriously.

It is suggested here that before the Japanese make further offers of their services as mediators they should rebill the "brokerage" they are charging for their good offices between Thailand and Indo-China. It is believed here that this "brokerage" will be high—such matters as airports and shipping facilities in Thailand, for instance.

This would bring the Japanese very close to vital British possessions on the Malay peninsula and recent reinforcements brought to Singapore show that the British are not prepared to give way without a fight.

Two Personalities Insure Worth of Their Films

Loew and Lewin Combine Rare Qualities; The Civic Theater Announces Tryouts; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS NOT SURPRISING that the Messrs. David L. Loew and Albert Lewin, in their first joint production for United Artists, should have turned out so soundly conceived and skillfully executed a picture as "So Ends Our Night." Mr. Loew and Mr. Lewin are thoughtful, earnest and entertaining young men whose sound acumen is reflected in their screen product.

BELL

"So Ends Our Night" has been bobbing up in this space ever since its preview screening at the time of the President's Birthday Celebrations, when Glenn Ford, one of its principal players, was present to see himself acting opposite Margaret Sullavan, whom he frankly admits was one of his earliest "crushes." Presumably it will bob up on the screen at Loew's Palace when, as and if the current "Philadelphia Story" ever gets through telling itself.

At luncheon in the Carlton yesterday —under the auspices of Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., and Father Hartke, in charge of the department of speech and drama at Catholic University—the double L's had many handsome things to say in corroboration of our own views of the high promise of the juvenile Mr. Ford's future on the screen. They also had something to say concerning their next picture, which will be a romantic drama, with just a shade of war background, involving a member of the R. A. F., and an English barmaid in the purling cadences of a lilting love—or something like that. But more than that was revealed in their conversation.

The son of a famous father—Marcus Loew, one of the most distinguished figures in the history of the cinema in America—and a Harvard graduate, with a considerable measure of scholastic eminence to his credit, Mr. Loew and Mr. Lewin bring a peculiarly happy coalition of talents to the fulfillment of the screen's higher aims. They are not dreamers. They are a couple of practical "showmen," whose knowledge of the theater is reinforced by qualities of mind that in the old days seldom found their way into the studios. You will realize that, immediately you have seen "So Ends Our Night."

Following yesterday's midday joust with persiflage and provender, Mr. Lewin and Mr. Loew addressed the Washington college dramatic groups at C. U., with particular emphasis upon the difficulties that two young fellows trying to get along may expect to encounter in the production and distribution of motion pictures of the better sort. They were welcomed to Washington, for the first time since the era of the First World War, by Father Hartke's graceful and brief words that entirely omitted reference to the fact that he not only is a producer in his own right but a former motion picture actor native to our own adopted Chicago.

And speaking of Father Hartke, producer, the next production of the Catholic University acting group will be in the nature of a "big-time" enterprise. This will be the item, already mentioned here more than once, known by the name of "God's Stage." It will open a six-day engagement at C. U., on Thursday night, February 27, and then will go on tour. After the Washington performances, the production will be presented at Notre Dame, on the fringes of South Bend, Ind., and then proceed to play a comprehensive circuit of the colleges of the Middle West. Thus does Father Hartke's progressiveness express itself.

Tryouts for two forthcoming productions of the Washington Civic Theater will be held on Saturday evening, February 22, at the theater headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. One of the plays to be cast will be a production the Civic will take out of town in April; the other, the regular April production, to be presented in Wardman Park Theater. The Civic Theater once more is looking up and deserves unstinted local support as an institution which eventually will fully live up to its name.

The entertainment value of two downtown screen attractions that enter their respective third weeks today is pretty eloquently attested by the mere fact that they do. The one is "The Philadelphia Story," at Loew's Palace; the other, "Back Street," at RKO-Keith's. So much already has been spread across this space concerning the virtues of both that further syllables suggest some such word as supererogation. If you haven't seen either one, or both, the smart thing to do would be to see both—not either one.

Ted Weems and His Orchestra, who can't "beat the band" on the radio networks, have been booked for an early headline engagement at Loew's Capitol Theater. In the meantime, Managing Director Gene Ford is dreaming up a "Berserk Revue," which he promises will be the craziest stage show ever devised to drive an audience nuts. It will have Jay C. Flippen as its master of ceremonies, which, in itself, is assurance of prodigious lunacy.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb, 19.

While I was talking to Nazimova yesterday on the set of "Blood and Sand" she said, "I believe everyone on this picture feels the ghost of Valentino hovering about. I know I do."

HOPPER

"But why?" I asked innocently.

"Well, so many people have taken credit for finding him that I almost hesitate to disturb their illusions. But now that I'm playing his mother, or rather the mother of Tyrone Power, who's playing his part in 'Blood and Sand,' my memory goes back 21 years, when I was getting ready to do a silent version of 'Camille.' I'd interviewed dozens of youngsters who wanted to play Armand, when into my office was ushered a rather fat, swarthy lad with bushy, black eyebrows tangled across his forehead, who introduced himself as Rudolph Valentino.

"Though he was almost grotesque, I saw that if he reduced and plucked his eyebrows he'd make a perfect Latin lover. He did just that, and he was so good in 'Camille' that he went from that into 'The Four Horsemen,' then into 'Blood and Sand.'"

But Nazimova's own story is even greater than Valentino's. She was a great star of the Russian and American stage before she came to films. Everything she did made news. She was one of the first to buy a big estate on Sunset Boulevard, which has long since been turned into a hotel called the Garden of Allah, she she now lives in a tiny apartment.

When she was on a picture she kept her figure by eating apples . . . Then Nazimova returned to Broadway and stayed 16 years.

Her friend, Director George Cukor, brought her back to Hollywood to be technical adviser on the picture "Zaza," because he remembered her performance in the stage play. When David Selznick was looking for a mature woman to play "The Young in Heart" Nazimova's name was mentioned, and George Cukor made an excellent test of her, but in spite of this Selznick didn't think her suitable. He brought out from retirement Maude Adams, who turned the part down. Finally Minnie DuPree, aged 75, got it—it was her first and last screen role.

Then M-G-M cast Nazimova as the mother in "Escape." Though her part was small, she was so powerful, even in her coffin scene, that you were more conscious of her than of Norma Shearer and Bob Taylor.

Now, after 21 years, she's coming into her own as Tyrone Power's mother in "Blood and Sand," the story Valentino made memorable.

Maisie Ravier, the most sagacious, sophisticated and searing of the cinema's prevalent show girls, transfers her seductions to the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater this morning in that emotionally tumultuous thing called "Maisie Was a Lady."

Maybe Maisie was, but you never would suspect it until practically the final flash of the film. At that opportune juncture it turns out that she has salvaged an overrich household from all sorts of social, financial and romantic disaster. She brings this happy consummation about through a steady flow of waggish wisecracking that is something to hear. Probably no carnival gal ever talked like that, but it is engaging to suspect that possibility, sometime, somewhere, one did.

Ann Sothern, in the role of Maisie, is, as has been pointed out here numerous times before, the last word in efficiency in depicting what a deluded popular impression seems to deem the typical femme of the "small time." There is no quarrel with Miss Sothern's latest Maisie. Neither is there any quarrel with the manner in which Lew Ayres portrays a gold-plated young wastrel, Maureen O'Sullivan his distraught sister, or C. Aubrey Smith the butler, who has been in the family's service for something like 30 years. In fact, there is no quarrel that we can think of with any part of "Maisie Was a Lady." It is one of the best of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's minor majors, if that adds up.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 19.

ON MARCH 7 Robert Montgomery's newest picture, "Rage in Heaven," will be released. The story was written by James Hilton, and when Montgomery read it for the first time he agreed to play the leading role. Shortly before the picture was to start, however, he indicated his displeasure—but rather than violate his contract the star accepted his fate and submitted to the camera . . . Throughout the filming Montgomery read his lines without any change of expression—unemotionally and with toneless voice . . . The Screen Actors Guild was consulted, and charges of sabotage were prepared against him. But the picture had been completed, the investment already had been made, and no amount of censure could rescue the story.

LYONS

ROBERT THOEREN, co-author of the screen play, finally offered one suggestion, which was adopted—the insertion of a single scene, which was sufficient to assure the success of "Rage in Heaven." That scene, inserted at the beginning of the movie, shows a psychiatrist diagnosing the principal character. "There are definite symptoms of paranoia," declares the doctor concerning the character portrayed by Montgomery, "a tonelessness in his voice, a peculiar lack of emotion . . . Yes, he's insane."

BRECKENRIDGE LONG, Assistant Secretary of State, may be transferred to the Vatican City if Myron Taylor decides that he's too ill to return there . . . The FBI now investigates all White House visitors before their appointments are set . . . John Gunther has returned from his trip to inside South America . . . Pernikoff, who has been Greta Garbo's host, and the 21 Club have severed diplomatic relations . . . Benny Goodman and his sextette will introduce his newest classical composition for New York City's musical festival over WNYC on February 19 . . . Universal will produce Stefan Zweig's "Letters of an Unknown Woman." John Stahl used all that material in "Only Yesterday," which Universal produced only a few years ago.

MARQUIS JAMES, the Pultizer Prize biographer, has been working at "Nemour," the du Pont estate in Wilmington, where he is writing a du Pont biography. Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker, accompanied James to Wilmington. There Ross wrote a letter to Dan Silberberg, the Wall Street broker: "Dear Dan: The rug in this du Pont room cost $50,000" . . . The next day Silberberg was a caller at the White House. From Steve Early's office he wrote this reply to Ross: "Dear Harold: The rug in this room was ordered by Ickes, who inherited it from Albert Fall, who got it from Doheny, who got it from du Pont—for nothing."

GENE FOWLER, who will write the Hollywood columns for PM, will receive $60 a week for the job. He was to receive more, but Ben Hecht, who gets $75 a week for his columns, protested—insisting that Gene's salary must be less than his . . . The medical examiner now has three clues to corroborate the identification of Panto, the longshoreman whose body was found encased in concrete . . . A Gaiety Burlesque comic visited next door backstage at "Arsenic and Old Lace" and watched Allyn Joslyn do a "take." He criticized it and told Joslyn: "Even in burlesque I couldn't do that." Joslyn smiled, and the burlesque comic told him: "But I sure'd like to have your situations."

BILL SISTROM, preparing "Little Orvie," decided he wanted a name-actor for the title role. He invited John Barrymore's former wife, Dolores Costello, to bring her 7-yar-old son, John Costilo Barrymore, to the studio . . . John was brought to the sets and was most observant. Sistrom showed him how movies were made, and then took him into the office. "John, would you like to be doing what those other people were doing out there?" he asked . . . The boy avoided his gaze and stared silently at the ceiling . . . "John," Sistrom continued, "wouldn't you like to act in a movie?" . . . The youngest Barrymore fidgeted, shook his head and said: "No" . . . "Why not?" asked Sistrom . . . "Because," answered the descendant of the two great screen families, "movies stink."

ARTE SHAW, the band leader, is one of the few civilians ever invited to cross San Francisco Bay and visit the Federal Penitentiary at Alcatraz. This was arranged last month when Shaw met Warden Johnson, who extended the invitation . . . The band leader, who had seen too many Warner Brothers movies, was escorted inside and walked through the cell corridors . . . "I don't believe it," he whispered to the warden—who asked: "Why?"—and Shaw explained: "Where's John Garfield?"

A. F. L. Calls Arnold's Data 'Propaganda'

By International News Service

Miami, Fla., Feb. 19.—The American Federation of Labor's executive council today denounced as "subtle propaganda" the recent testimony of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold before the House Judiciary Committee in Washington.

Arnold in his testimony had declared that labor union practices were boosting the Nation's bill for food and housing. President William Green, of the A. F. of L., said in announcing the action of the council:

"Mr. Arnold's statements were false and unfair and were aimed at free labor. He offers a lot of data in defense of his opinions and adds that the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Hutcheson case 'tends inevitably to a labor dictatorship.' This assumes what cannot conceivably be proved . . .

Pledges to Resist

"It is our opinion that the anti-trust department of the Federal Department of Justice does not intend to be restrained by the Supreme Court but proposes to go on prosecuting labor unions even though the high court has rejected the grounds on which such prosecutions are based.

"The A. F. of L. will continue to resist this perversion of antitrust laws by the antitrust department of the Government with all the power and resources at its command."

The council today also went on record in opposition to a bill introduced in Congress by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, to regulate the hiring of sailors and setting up hiring restrictions and other control over seamen.

Council members said they approved of some sections of the bill, but that others were objectionable.

Five-Man Board Sought

At the request of the American Federation of Labor, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, introduced legislation yesterday to increase the three-man Labor Relations Board to five members.

Under other provisions of the A. F. L.'s suggested amendments, as offered by Ramspeck, craft units could determine their own bargaining status.

Property Managers Urged to Take Interest In the Preservation of Neighborhoods

CHARTER PRESENTED—The District of Columbia Chapter, Institute of Real Estate Management, received its charter yesterday at a dinner meeting in the Mayflower Hotel. Left to right—J. William Markheim, Harry Grant Atkinson, Paul O. Durry and Waverly Taylor, president of the Washington Real Estate Board

Washington property managers were advised last night to take an active part in the preservation of neighborhoods in which properties they manage are located.

The speaker was Harry Grant Atkinson, of Chicago, executive secretary of the Institute of Real Estate Management, professional branch of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"The property manager must remember that his property, standing on a given site, is not an isolated entity separate and apart from the surrounding improvements. On the contrary, it bears a close relationship not only to the sites in the immediate proximity, but to the entire neighborhood of which it is a part," Atkinson told the Washington Real Estate Board at a meeting in the Ambassador Hotel.

The manager who controls one or more buildings in a neighborhood "is an important cog in the mechanism of community life. Upon his vision, knowledge and efficiency depend the character and potential life of the property, so intimately bound up with the financial return to the owner, the comfort and happiness of the tenants and the general welfare of the community as a whole," Atkinson stated.

It's Wasp-Waists in Paris, but Commercial Buyers Are Few

By Alice Maxwell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris (via Berlin), Feb. 12 (delayed).—Wasp waists and swirling hems characterized the first showing of spring fashions in Paris since the German occupation.

The audience was in strong contrast to visitors of other years. Salons were well filled, but almost entirely with private French customers. No commercial buyers were present and only a few style reporters attended.

There appeared to be no Germans present either as buyers or private customers.

Leading American style magazines did not send representatives, owing to the difficulty of getting style news over to their periodicals in time for publication.

Bust Accented

Materials were used with a lavish hand in the models shown to flare frocks and coats. Waists were pulled in to breath-taking tightness, and bodices molded to accent raised busts and natural shoulders.

These were the silhouette highlights in the collection, which Paquin, one of Paris' oldest dressmaking houses and the only one left on the Rue de la Paix, paraded yesterday:

In evening dresses figures were given the same scant treatment above the waistline and the same extravagance of flare and fullness below. The absence of decollete was marked, evening necks being cut high and the arms covered with sleeves.

Suits were played up in great numbers and in many versions. Bolero suits were shown in black or navy wools with printed crepe blouses. Other suits had loose box-style jackets. Strictly tailored suits were featured in men's suiting and plain wools.

Skirts Are Full

Prominence is given to afternoon suits in pastel-colored jerseys, some with lace jabots or fox fur revers. These had short, tight-waisted jackets, rippled in front below the waistline and had very full circular skirts.

Dress skirts swirled with shirs and pleatings, stressing front fullness and all-day skirts were short with the hems reaching to the base of the knee cap. Coats rippled with umbrella pleats or full circular cuts.

A few loose-back coats were shown, but the majority of coats had fitted princess lines with the waist drastically nipped in.

Printed crepes were used for suits and frocks in a pattern featuring closely covered grounds with floral designs in brilliant multi-color. Print dresses had short sleeves, swirling skirts and high necks with self-ties or frilled white organdie vestees. They had loose coats of dark wools or printed jackets on loose box lines to the hip.

Day dress colors included white, powder and turquoise blues, dusty pinks, pale grays, violet, geranium, royal, navy and black.

Too Bad About Those Stockings, Girls—You Might Try 'Woolies'

Stores all over town were swamped yesterday with women carrying little bundles. Some were irate, some were puzzled, but they all exhibited remnants of stockings they were wearing in Tuesday's big blow and wanted to know "how come."

And further, they wanted to know what to do to protect their hosiery should the occasion arise again.

In most instances, it was learned, the answer to "how come?" was given by showing customers The Post story and pictures explaining how grit and sand were apparently blown up from the streets to snag sheer hose.

From the best advice that could be procured, the answer on what to do next time was "woolen stockings." That was the opinion collected from sundry hosiery shops and department stores. Those interviewed said they had seen nothing like it before and could only suggest consultation with the Weather Bureau before leaving home; and proceeding accordingly.

One store received 25 complaints and made good the damages—"even if it was sort of an act of God which caused the trouble," said a spokesman.

In other cases, however, the stores disclaimed any responsibility and declined to reimburse the customers.

"But they were all good-natured and just went ahead and bought new hose," said the head of one shop which received about 50 complaints.

More than 100 complaints and requests for exchanges were received by each of six of the city's leading department stores, it was reported.

Storekeepers said that in the majority of cases customers didn't criticize the hose after receiving an explanation of what apparently happened.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 19 (INS).—A movie Bradford Ropes has written for Jackie Cooper has many autobiographical touches and reflects in part the life of Jackie himself. The story is that of a child star who, at the age of 19, having outgrown his success in movies, starts coaching another little child in the type of role in which he was most successful. In a sense the story is fictional, since Jackie is riding high after having retired from the screen at the ripe old age of 14. As you will remember, the Cooper lad came back and made a smashing hit in "White Banners." Then he was starred in the "Aldrich family" series, which he has now outgrown, but he has become such a good actor that he stepped right from adolescence into grownup roles without losing a day on the screen.

PARSONS

When cameras start grinding on "The Little Foxes," you can put it down in your little book that James Stephenson will be playing the plum role of Bette Davis' husband. This will reunite the Academy Award trio of candidates all up for "The Letter"—Bette, Stephenson and Willie Wyler—and they're plenty potent, if you ask me. There isn't an actress and a director in the business who work better together than Bette and William Wyler.

The best story idea I've heard in a long time is Sol Siegel's bright hunch to produce an opus titled "World Premiere" (commonly called "permeer by you and me). It's based on one of those junkets such as have been staged to Dodge City or Miami with newspaper people and movie stars on the bandwagon. But here's where the excitement comes in. Somebody is murdered. Hope it isn't a columnist.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cesar Romero had six birthday cakes on the set of "Great American Broadcast"—and that reminds me, Cesar doesn't care who knows that his favorite girl friend is Priscilla Stillman; Eddie Hillman bought the Orry Kelly prize-winning creation for his wife, June Inverclyde, at the Sylvia Fairbanks-Lady Mendl pay cocktail party. Sid Grauman paid $350 for it and then turned it back to be reauctioned. Virginia Field modeled the dress and she looked so pretty in it, it might have been made for her.

Sir Charles Mendl bought Mary Pickford's hat and later presented it to her. She bought the creation I wore and later it was sold to Mrs. Johnnie Weissmuller's mother. That reminds me, Johnnie and Beryl were together as happy as happy could be; Mary Hay looked as cute as she could be in a big picture hat which brought $35. Liz Whitney was one of the bidders; Bill Haines bought Constance Bennett's chapeau with the stipulation she wear it in a picture; Cobina Wright's hat went at a big price. Heather Thatcher modeled Sally Eilers' chapeau which was one of the prettiest hats worn; Fay Wray, who sold many tickets, was with Raymond Hakim. They remained for dinner with Sylvia Fairbanks at the House of Murphy after the party was over.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

As to just what the German Propaganda Office was up to when it asked for comments and criticisms concerning its short-wave broadcasts to North America it is hard to say. Certainly, considering Dr. Goebbels' reputation for astuteness and subtlety, it is difficult to believe that the request can be as stupid as it seems at first glance. Possibly there is more to it than met the eye of those Americans who hastened to avail themselves of the opportunity to dispatch comic valentines to Herr Hitler at his own expense.

It may, for instance, have been a kind of practical joke on the British Intelligence Service, which was thus confronted by the job of trying to determine whether any of these bronx cheers cloaked messages of military importance. If, acting on the advice of the newspaper PM, 100,000 Americans were to seize this opportunity to "get hunk with Hitler," the problem of intercepting and decoding one or two really significant messages would become well-nigh insuperable. Yet 100,000 collect radio messages would cost the Nazis the equivalent of five Messerschmitts-109. It might, therefore, be worth the while of somebody in our own Intelligence Service to find out whether there is any information transmissible from America to Germany that would be worth that price.

But if the Nazis were really after a cross-section of American opinion concerning themselves and their works, they certainly got it. Those Americans who told Hitler that they want most to hear an official announcement of his death spoke the sentiment of the great majority of their countrymen. But this suggestion was scarcely received in Berlin with pained astonishment. You can safely bet the price of a dozen Messerschmitts-109 that the German intelligence was already accurately informed about the state of popular opinion in America.

Somehow the whole scheme looks just a little too good to be strictly on the level. It is a point of some interest that those who have signed their names to derisive messages to the Fuehrer, have, under the decree of May 6, 1940, rendered themselves liable to punishment should they ever fall into the hands of the Nazis. This makes another good reason for helping the British to beat Hitler.

On Firmer Ground

When the Supreme Court is sharply divided in deciding a case, both the ruling and dissenting opinions are often convincing in themselves. Certainly Mr. Justice Frankfurter marshaled ample logic to support the Court's decision restricting the power of the Federal Trade Commission to prevent unfair methods of competition in intrastate commerce. Nevertheless, Mr. Justice Douglas wrote a persuasive dissent in which Justices Black and Reed joined.

The Federal Trade Commission long ago barred the sale of candy in "break and take" packages in interstate commerce as an unfair method of competition. The question at issue was whether this prohibition could be extended to a candy manufacturer operating only in Illinois. Justices Douglas, Black and Reed took the view that this unfair competition, even though confined to a single State, has the effect of burdening and impairing the business of candy manufacturers in sending their goods across State lines. "It is the existence of that injury to interstate commerce," says the dissenting opinion, "not the interstate or intrastate character of the conduct causing the injury, which is important."

This view certainly appears to be in harmony with various decisions the Court has handed down in recent years. But a principle of greater importance swayed the majority in formulating its conclusion. It did not say that Congress lacks power to regulate intrastate commerce if it finds that such power is necessary to permit effective control of trade across State lines. Taking note of the fact that the FTC Act forbids only "unfair methods of competition in (interstate) commerce," the Court refused to read into that language a ban upon competition in any way affecting such trade. In the absence of a clear mandate from Congress the Court properly declined to take the responsibility of giving "a Federal agency pervasive control over myriads of local businesses in matters heretofore traditionally left to local custom or local law."

The division of the Court is sufficient indication that the scope of the law is not entirely clear. The dissenting justices resolved the doubt in favor of complete and effective regulation of business, while the court resolved the doubt in favor of our Federal system of government. From the broad viewpoint of maintaining our constitutional democracy, with its wise division of powers, there can be little question as to which opinion rests upon the firmer ground.

Come The Whole World

A few days ago the British authorities at Singapore announced that the water approaches to that great naval base had been heavily mined. Yesterday saw the arrival at the Malay metropolis of undisclosed thousands of Australian troops, together with a great number of bombers and fighting planes. The meaning of these British defensive measures in southeastern Asia needs no emphasis. Great Britain today is bracing herself against the possibility of a German all-out onslaught which may break out at any moment. As a consequence of the Nazi penetration of Bulgaria and the Turkish-Bulgarian pact of friendship, she also faces an increasingly critical situation in the Balkans. Nonetheless the British authorities are not afraid at this time to divert part of the empire's military and air strength to Singapore. Nothing could more clearly or dramatically reveal the significance in British eyes of defending Singapore against any Japanese attack. No step stands out in such high relief to prove that Britain, even when confronted with Atlas-like responsibilities in the waging of war, has run up for all to see Nelson's motto that the boldest measures are the safest.

In the past there has been a great deal of justifiable suspicion in Washington over Britain's Far Eastern policies. In 1931, at the time of the Manchurian crisis which marked the inception of a cycle of aggression which has continued with increasing fury until the present time, Britain's unwillingness to take a strong stand against the Japanese was a great deterrent to Anglo-American cooperation in the Pacific. And the same spirit of doubt and hesitation which characterized the policies of Sir John Simon (nicknamed the Fox) has not infrequently been manifested by his successors in Downing Street.

It can now be taken for granted that the day of hesitation is over for Britain. In the Far East as in Europe she is prepared to stand her ground against the aggressors. The warning to Japan is clear. The Japanese may have assumed that by launching an attack on Singapore at a moment when Great Britain is bedeviled by dangers very much nearer home, the British would cave in and turn over to the Island Empire the keys to Malaya, the Dutch East Indies and Australasia. To continue that assumption now would be a blunder worse than a crime on the part of those who have the destinies of the Japanese people in their keeping. Indeed the statement attributed to unofficial Japanse observers in Tokyo that the arrival of the Australians in Singapore is part of a British plot to create a crisis in the Far East reflects the consternation which Britain's bold action has created in Japanese circles.

If the Japanese can no longer safely discount Britain's determination to fight for Singapore, they would be equally unwise to discount the role of the United States in the present Far Eastern crisis. No longer can Japan's saber rattling or her protestations of peace make the slightest impression upon this Administration. The Nation, as Mr. Sumner Welles implies, has adopted the attitude of the gentleman from Missouri that evidence of peaceful intent must be expressed in deeds. Japanese words have lost all meaning as the result of a decade of aggression. But American words still mean what they say—that this country has not written off and has no intention of writing off its interests in the Far East. If there were any tendency to scuttle, the manner in which British policy is being so clearly expressed in action would be sufficient to smother it.

Appeaser Gives In

The resignation of Hendryk Colijn as editor of the Amsterdam Standaard is a story of the hopelessness of appeasing a tyrant. Off and on Dr. Colijn has been Prime Minister of the Netherlands for so many years that he has earned the sobriquet of Holland's Grand Old Man. No man in continental Europe fought harder for a live-and-let-live Europe in pre-Nazi days. He hated Naziism; but like most of the statesmen among the little neutrals, the conflict found him strictly impartial. The neutrals preferred to hope against hope that they might be left unmolested, and, contrary to Nazi allegations, took no step to make the distinction of the Dutch jurist and father of international law, Grotius, between just and unjust wars. All they did, apart from putting up relatively meager defenses, was to pray for some compromise between the two belligerents. The blitzkrieg dashed these hopes. They who feared to hang together were hanged separately, and, among the statesmen of the erstwhile neutrals, Dr. Colijn became so impressed with Nazi might that he felt there was no alternative but for the Netherlands to work out some Dutch understanding with the Nazis. Accordingly Dr. Colijn wrote a book around his thesis. Thinking that the Nazis at least would be good politicians, he outlined a basis for the new order, which was to allow the Netherlands her royal house and independence. The Nazis, however, had other ideas. No independence was allowed the Dutch; men were flung right and left into concentration camps, including every member of the foreign office; the future of the House of Orange was simply ignored; and the church pastors were jailed. These indignities have been cumulative. But Dr. Colijn as an editor couldn't comment upon them, nor has there been any other avenue of protest left. The latest trial that the Dutch have to bear is the extension of the hostage system to the Netherlands. German spy suspects in the Dutch East Indies have been locked up, and the Nazis have responded by imprisoning all Dutchmen with Dutch East Indies connections. The Nazis won't hear of reciprocal release on the basis that the Germans leave the Dutch East Indies—the Germans must be allowed to return to their Fifth Column jobs. This the Dutch have refused to do, and so innocent Dutchmen continue to be rounded up. Such spectacles doubtless have persuaded Dr. Colijn to recognize that there is such a moral gulf dividing him from the Nazis that his editorship is a travesty.

In The Democratic Way

Americans who are listening to the debate on the lease-lend bill in the Senate or following the reports of this momentous controversy in the press and over the radio will find reason for renewed faith in the strength of democracy. The debate is going forward on a high plane. There is no suggestion of filibustering. The speakers have pitched their remarks to the key of our national interest. In many instances the clash of views has been sharp but nonetheless in keeping with the democratic tradition.

Majority Leader Barkley set the pace by declaring that the momentous character of the bill and the grave international situation "require of us the utmost sincerity, calmness, frankness, and courage in our approach to and our discussion of this tremendous subject." Every Senator who has spoken thus far seems to have been conscious of his responsibility in this respect. Senator Clark, of Missouri, condemned the Administration's bill in no uncertain terms. But he also expressed confidence in the "integrity, patriotism and ability" of the President. He pledged the opposition to refrain from dilatory tactics and asked that earnest debate remain untainted by name-calling and attempts at intimidation.

"If we ever strove to reject the substitution of anathema for argument," said Senator Vandenberg, "now is the essential time. If we ever needed the gift of divine guidance, the hour has struck. Yet if we ever needed the brave truth, as God gives it to each one of us to see the truth, the Republic needs it now." Mr. Vandenberg also made a vigorous assault on the bill, but this followed a "fervent prayer" for vindication, not of his own view, but of the "Congressional verdict." In debating such a momentous issue no legislator should be expected to pull his punches. The fact that Senators can thunder forth their conflicting views with little rancor or ill will is a mark of maturity in self-government of which the country may well be proud.

In every great emergency in our history Congress has granted enormous powers to the President. The significant fact is that this authority has usually been granted through the traditional democratic process and has been exercised only for the duration of the emergency. Certainly in this instance the progress of the lease-lend bill through Congress has been attended by all the safeguards provided in our constitutional system. Extensive hearings were conducted by House and Senate committees; debate throughout the country has been free and unrestrained; the President has shown genuine wisdom and restraint in not interfering with the legislative process; amendments have been accepted when they won majority approval; and there is every indication that the popularity of the bill in Congress reflects the attitude of the country.

Final enactment of the bill may now be taken for granted. It is a far-reaching measure befitting the role of a great democracy in these perilous times. It imposes a tremendous responsibility upon the President, and the outcome of the policy thus launched will rest in large measure in his hands. For this very reason it is particularly salutary that the bill is moving toward enactment in accord with the best of our democratic tradition.

THE CLIFFS OF ENGLAND

They guard the cliffs of England
With dark eternal swords:
The Saxon kings, the Druids,
The high-nosed Norman lords.
The men who once were England,
Who long are in their graves—
They watch tonight, all starlit

There see mighty Arthur
Among his noble men;
Alfred and Coeur-de-Lion
Come back to fight again.
St. George, returned to England,
Starlit in his steel.

Sharing The Blame

During the last ten years a belief has grown up in this country that the failure to halt the first of the series of aggressions culminating in this war was due to Britain's "letting us down" when Japan invaded Manchuria. Now that storm clouds are gathering around British and American territories in the Far East, it seems important to inquire whether such a one-way allocation of blame for the failure in Manchuria is justifiable.

From reading Mr. Stimson's "Far Eastern Crises," dealing with the Manchuria dispute, it appears that the principal instance of Britain's "letting us down" was her refusal to join us in the "nonrecognition" doctrine we announced on January 7, 1932. The British government would not go along with us then, but acceded to this policy two months later in a resolution it sponsored through the League Assembly. That part of the picture does not seem to give adequate ground for placing the entire blame upon Great Britain.

Another part of this picture was the series of confidential telephone conversations between Washington and London. It is possible that the stenographic record of these conversations would show that we proposed firm measures to halt Japan and that London did "let us down." But these conversations have never been made public and are known to very few men. They certainly are not known to the writers and politicians who have placed all the responsibility for the Manchurian failure at the door of the British government.

There is still another part of this picture which should be taken into account: the action at Geneva at the time the Japanese assault was first launched and could not easily have been halted. The writer has been informed by a statesman who participated in the League Council meetings that much of the failure at that stage was due to the policy of the United States. According to him, we agreed to cooperate in a firm stand by the council, and all was prepared for such a stand when, owing to a change of policy in Washington, our agreement to cooperate was withdrawn, with paralyzing results. It may be remembered that Mr. Stimson places great emphasis in his book upon the inadequacy of cooperation between Washington and Geneva.

If a judgment should be sought from those who knew all sides of this picture, I believe it would show that the blame for failure in Manchuria may perhaps rest somewhat more heavily on London than on Washington, but that it is a responsibility which must be shared and cannot be concentrated upon either government.

LIVINGSTON HARTLEY.

"Carpetbaggers"

Dorothy Thompson's reference, in her column in The Post of February 14, to carpetbaggers is most unfortunate. I quote: "But no one yet has been able to found an empire on traitors. The North could not even do it in the South in the days of carpetbaggers." That is a very misleading statement, because the majority of people today do not understand that the course pursued in the South after the Civil War by a small group of Northern political conspirators was tremendously deplored by the North. I remember, as a child in a small New England town, hearing the carpetbaggers spoken of as a disgrace to the North. It is regrettable that Dorothy Thompson should have given the impression that the North approved of the carpetbaggers, when the truth was they absolutely condemned them. Had Lincoln lived it would not have been allowed to go on, but Andrew Johnson, the one man who could have stopped it, did not interfere. MARY O. SUMNER.
Washington, Feb. 18.

Of Strikes

In all the papers a lot is written about the defense program which is going on. But how can anybody suspect that we are prepared when there are a lot of strikes in every region of the States. It is my opinion that these strikes should be stopped by law, because I know that there is nobody in America who would like to have the same fate happen to us that happened to France almost a year ago. But that is inevitable if these strikes aren't stopped immediately.

I have been in this country two years as a refugee from Germany and I know what it means to be under German rule, and it certainly is not pleasant. I am here with my parents, brother and sister. I hoped to find here happiness, and I found it to a cetrain extent. But it grieves me a lot to read about these strikes. LEO JACOBS.
Washington, Feb. 7.

It would appear to any man who has his ear close to the ground that various unions of the C.I.O. are lacking in American spirit and loyalty. It should be whispered to them that the right to strike is not the right to ruin. HAROLD CHILD.
Norfolk, Va., Feb. 15.

Strike Situation

Striking at a time like this on well-paid defense jobs is nearer treason than anything else. The Allis-Chalmers strike was only recently settled after a loss of output of 8,000 men for 25 days. Shall we permit continued strikes or demand patriotism?

The world has said "too late" too many times in the last couple of years—in Czecho-Slovakia, in Poland, in Holland, in Belgium, in the Netherlands and in France. Labor's records in England and France, causing much delay, are not very creditable. Labor was awakened only when it clearly saw where its delay was heading them—the death of near relatives and friends for lack of sufficient weapons of war. Rest assured no battle will ever be won on strikes. Our defense plants should be working 24 hours a day and 7 days a week.

The conscripted boys and young men may well call a halt to this un-Americanism and demand some sort of Congressional action. Why should their lives be perhaps jeopardized in even the slightest degree through lack of material for practice purposes when the very object of the defense program is to be ready for any eventuality? B.
Washington, Feb. 17.

Slugged Food For Europe

The grim, hideous thing about this impending struggle of the ages—now so near in the offing—is that cataclysm girdling the globe can't convince America that we must not feed tyranny. Even a dream consciousness must realize that Britain is civilization's Horatio at the Bridge, and that her lifeline is almost fatally threatened. Surely even an American can appreciate the wide divergence between merciful nonsense and the kind of enlightenment that stanchly refuses to sell posterity into slavery.

Those starving countries are starving because Hitler robbed them once—as he'd rob them 10,000 times over. Should America scandalize this age with the stupidity of putting the loot there for him. Let us liberate those starving slaves by feeding Britain, not their enemy—the forces of savagery.

Railroad Retirement Board

As a former employe of the Railroad Retirement Board I would like to correct what I believe to be a false impression given by Jerry Klutz in his column February 17.

The separation of several hundred employes mentioned was primarily due to inefficient planning and a lack of knowledge of the "seasons" in the railroad industry, not the "business boom." The board refused to hire economists that knew the railroad industry, and those hired thought the only reliable source of information on railroad labor was not efficient enough for their purpose. Consequently, there was a wholesale recruiting of too many employes from May to July, 1939, and in November, 1939, the reduction in force started which, if my memory serves me right, was before the business boom.

These employes were recruited from civil service registers and by transfer from other Government agencies. At least 90 per cent were without prior railroad service as stipulated in the Railroad Retirement and Unemployment Insurance Acts, and there were 90,000 former railroad employes unemployed. The board will justify its action by stating that the 90,000 former railroad employes did not have civil service eligibility. However, the board had a year from the passing of the Unemployment Insurance Act until its effective date to request civil service examinations for the positions in the board requiring, by law, civil service eligibility with preference given to eligibles with prior railroad service. And railroad labor has a representative on the board to look after the interests of railroad labor.

Now the board is asking for a deficiency appropriation of $462,000 to recruit additional personnel. This will probably mean another layoff in the board, as anyone familiar with the railroad industry knows that a person unfamiliar with railroad labor agreements cannot successfully check the prior service of railroad employes. However, this would be only the third major layoff the board has experienced since January, 1938, when more than 300 employes were separated, some being notified at home, by telephone Saturday afternoon, not to report for duty Monday morning. They were still serving their six-month probational appointment, and at least 50 per cent of those separated had substantial prior railroad service, which by law, required the board to give them preference. And railroad labor is represented on the board. UNPREJUDICED.

English-Speaking Union

For the last few weeks I have been reading and hearing about an idea to unite the English-speaking democracies, especially under the plan of "Union Now." I know nothing about this plan, except that in a large way it seems very good. If the Nazis are spreading out beyond their national borders of the old Germany, it may perhaps be advisable for us, who are opposed to the Nazis, to unite with other nations who feel as we do about combating the Nazi menace. Perhaps modern methods of communication will make it necessary for the world to think in terms of larger units, larger than nations.

I am all for the American way of living. If any union or combination with England would alter our American way of life, I want none of it. However, there must be many people who are informed and who would be able to discuss this new idea of "Union Now," showing the details of how it is to operate and still allow us to retain our American individuality. I would really like to know something about it, and I suppose there are many who would like to hear more about it from informed sources.

The Post Impressionist

Rehearsals At Home

Among the gentle domestic arts we have lost, along with chromos and hand-painted china, is that of elocution. This necessary element of culture could be taught by mail, with pictures, but most often was inculcated in the everyday parlor, or the library, in some such manner as the following:

"Would you like to hear the piece that Charlie is to recite next Thursday?" Mother would ask. "Perhaps you can suggest some gestures."

"All right!' exclaimed Grandpa. "Full steam ahead! Let's hear young Demosthenes."

"Charlie," said Mrs. Sinclair, "make your bow."

"What a graceful genuflexion!" exclaimed Nancy.

"Is that a foreign word?" asked Grandma.

"It is a deep bow, made in some churches before entering pews."

"Well," declared Mrs. Hewitt, "we don't use that in our church.'

"Don't forget your gestures, cautioned Mother. "Remember that a piece can be made or marred by gestures.'

"I don't see any sense in them," said Mr. Hewitt. "Why not go ahead, say what you've got to say, then quit?"

"Father," said Louise, "all prominent men use gestures. I expect great things from Charlie. State the title first," she prompted.

"Marco Bozzaris."

"What's that?" exclaimed Grandpa.

"It's the name of a Greek hero, Father."

"Give the title again, son, and the name of the author."

"Marco Bozzaris, by Fitz-Greene Halleck." Then, changing his tone:

"At midnight, in his guarded tent,
The Turk was dreaming of the hour . . ."

"Stop!" commanded Mother. "What was that sound you made?"

"It was a snore. I didn't know any gesture that would describe the Turk who lay dreaming, so I thought a snore would do."

"It is quite sufficient to say that the Turk was dreaming," said Mother. "Now complete the first verse."

"At midnight, in his guarded tent,
The Turk was dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knee in suppliance bent,
Should tremble at his power . . ."

"Why did you shake like a jellyfish?" asked Grandma.

"So as to show how Greece trembled after bending her knee."

"That's not necessary," declared Mother. "Recite the other lines."

"In dreams, through camp and court, he bore
The trophies of a conqueror . . ."

Grandpa dropped his cane. It hasn't been dented, Father," said Nancy as she returned it.

"Solid gold," said Mr. Hewitt. "Two double eagles were melted to make it. Why did Charlie fling his hand over his shoulder?"

"Because that is what the Turk would do with a bundle of anything he was carrying," replied the boy.

"Leave it out," said Mother. "Repeat those two lines, then go on."

"In dreams, through camp and court, he bore
The trophies of a conqueror;
In dreams his song of triumph heard,
Then wore his monarch's signet ring;
Then pressed that monarch's throne . . . a king!
As wild of thought, and gay of wing
As Eden's garden bird."

"Excellent!" applauded his aunt. "Where you point to the ring finger is most effective."

"Why did he wiggle-waggle his fingers?" asked Grandma.

"To imitate the wings of a bird," explained Aunt Nancy.

"At midnight, in the forest shades,
Bozzaris ranged his Suliote band . . ."

"By that gesture you indicate the trees?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Very well. Try it again, with even more solemnity."

He drew a deep breath, and began:

"At midnight, in the forest shades,
Bozzaris ranged his Suliote band,
True as the steel of their tried blades,
Heroes in heart and hand."

"Those are good gestures," said Mother. "Now the remainder of the verse."

Charlie's tone became even more lugubrious:

"There had the Persian thousands stood,
There had the glad earth drunk their blood . . ."

"Did the ground really drink blood?" exclaimed sister Betty.

"Hush!" cautioned Mother. "You must not interrupt."

"That's horrible, Louise, said Grandma. "But I suppose it's the way the poem reads."

"Yes, Mother. Repeat those lines, Charles, and make a sweeping gesture, to indicate where the Persians stood"

"If they'd made me do any of that Jumping-Jack business when I went to school, I'd ajumped smack-bang out of the room," commented Grandpa. "It's a wonder somebody doesn't get hurt."

"Oh, Father, don't be so old-fashioned," chided Aunt Nancy.

"Nancy, young folks think old folks are fools, and old folks know that young folks are?"

"Say that again, Grandpa," urged Betty.

"Hush," reprimanded Mother. "Now, Charlie."

"An hour passed on—the Turk awoke;
That bright dream was his last;
He awoke . . . to hear the sentry shriek,
To arms! They come! The Greek! The Greek!"

"Goodness!" exclaimed Grandma. "He'll scare the children."

Hannah, the hired girl, dashed in brandishing her broom. "What's matter? House on fire? I bash it out."

"Charlie is reciting his piece."

Today And Tomorrow

The Recorded Evidence

WITH SOME of the Senators arguing at this moment that the survival of British sea power is not a vital American interest, the record of their actual votes provides a practical test of their real convictions on this, the crucial point, in the whole debate.

LIPPMANN

LAST JULY, without dissent, the Senate authorized appropriations for the construction of what is popularly called a two-ocean Navy. This bill, which no Senator opposed, was adopted after a report by Senator Walsh, the chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, in which he had declared that "the committee is of the opinion that we may have to defend ourselves in both oceans at the same time," and after Senator Walsh had admitted in the course of the debate that "not possibly before 1946" could this expanded Navy be ready. Every one of the Senators who now says that the survival of Britain is not our vital interest agreed last July that the United States must spend at least $10,000,000,000 constructing an enormously greater Navy which cannot be completed for at least five years.

What had happened in July when the whole Senate agreed that this country must adopt the greatest naval program in the history of this or any other nation? France had fallen. Britain stood alone, and was threatened with invasion and conquest. That was the reason the Senate approved unanimously a two-ocean Navy. They approved it—Mr. Taft, Mr. Clark, Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Vandenberg and all the others—when they realized that British sea power might be destroyed. How then can they argue today that the British navy is not of vital importance to the defense of the United States? Did they not vote this gigantic expansion of the American Navy the moment they thought that Britain might be defeated?

ACTIONS SPEAK louder than words: How men vote on the national defense is the surest test of what they really think about the importance of Britain to the United States. In May, 1938, that is four months before Munich and fifteen months before the outbreak of war, 28 Senators voted against what was, by present standards, a modest expansion of the Navy. A year later, four months before the war began, 14 Senators voted against the 1939 naval bill. The following year, 1940, all the Senators voted for the two-ocean Navy.

What caused this conversion? What, for example, caused Senator Vandenberg to vote against the 1938 and the 1939 authorizations and in 1940 to agree to the enormously larger authorization? What change had occurred between 1938-1939 and 1940 which so radically changed Senator Vandenberg's views about the needs of American defense? There is only one possible answer. In 1938 and in 1939 Britain's sea power was regarded as impregnable. In 1940 it was threatened with destruction.

WHEN BRITAIN was threatened with destruction, the whole Senate went on record for a two-ocean Navy. That action is better evidence of what the Senators really think than anything they say now about the lend-lease bill. If they were acting responsibly last July, and of course they were acting responsibly, then their real conviction is that the possibility of a British defeat compels us to develop a Navy large enough to resist a two-ocean attack.

As Senator Walsh stated in a report on May 15 of last year: "From all the evidence available it appears that the United States can be defeated and conquered without military conquest of continental United States. Without a Navy capable of controlling the sea areas against an enemy, an effective blockade against our foreign commerce can be established and maintained at points thousands of miles from our coasts and well beyond aircraft range. Our outlying possessions will be captured and used against us as advance bases. There will be nothing to prevent the establishment of bases, by force if necessary, in this hemisphere, from which, as well as from aircraft carriers, repeated bombing raids can be dispatched against our highly industrialized areas. . . . With the loss of our outlying possessions, our foreign commerce, and subject to continued raids upon our coastal areas, our ultimate defeat is inevitable. It will be only a question of time, depending on how long our national will to further resist will hold out. Without the power to carry the fight to the enemy, there can be no alternative other than subjugation to his wishes."

THUS SPOKE Senator Walsh, the same Senator Walsh who admitted that the Navy to defend the country against this danger cannot possibly be completed for five years, the same Senator Walsh who does not wish to help Britain to survive.

It is not only a fair question but it is the crucial question which can be put to any Senator who now argues that support of Britain is not an American interest. The question is why did he agree to a two-ocean Navy when Britain was threatened with destruction and how knowing that this new Navy won't be completed until 1946, can he now refuse to take measures to prevent the destruction of British sea power in the long interval before we can have a two-ocean Navy? For a Senator who really believed that Britain did not matter to us would never have authorized the two-ocean Navy. A Senator who really believed that a victory of the Triple Axis was no threat to the United States would never have agreed to challenge the naval power of the Triple Axis by starting to build a two-ocean Navy.

For these Senators are saying: We can let Britain fall and then engage ourselves in a naval race with the conquerors of Britain. They are too pacifist to help our most powerful friend on earth and they are so jingo that they think they can challenge single-handed and provocatively by the greatest naval program in history all the combined enemies of Great Britain. Is this a policy which stands up when it is examined?

The Dual Choice

By Mark Sullivan

Sincere Differences

BARRING occasional excesses of phraseology, the fundamental argument of the opponents of the lease-lend bill in the Senate is true in fact. The bill does take us a distance into the war. In the sense that the President of the United States becomes officially responsible for producing much of the armament to be used against the Axis, and for directing the flow of it to the fighting fronts—in that sense and to that distance the bill takes us into the war. The distance is formidable; and in the nature of the case it is that kind of step that tends to lead to further steps.

We—that is, the Government of the United States—are to furnish much of the armament. The proportion we furnish is likely to increase—ultimately we are likely to furnish most of it; for Britain, as well as China and Greece, will want the United States to furnish as much as possible, so that they may use their own man-power for their armies and other fighting forces. When a nation furnishes most of the armament for a war, and the head of that nation has power and discretion to allocate where it shall go, almost inevitably it must follow that the head of that nation will have a hand in the strategy and conduct of the war, a responsibility for seeing that the war is won. This America should understand. What we do we should do with our eyes open.

THAT THE OPPONENTS of the bill are sound in their fundamental argument is completely recognized by the bill's supporters. Between the two groups there is mutual respect. Both faced a tragic dilemma; one group conscientiously took one course, the other group conscientiously took the other course. True, the Democrats, as the party of the President, were influenced to take the course he desired; and true, the Republicans, as the opposition party, were influenced toward the other course. But basically, the choice was one on which men conscientiously differed.

In the beginning, the dilemma was: Either take a chance on Britain being conquered, with the accompanying chance of what might happen to us after and if Britain were conquered. Or, take a chance on conferring upon the President of the United States enormous power and discretion with respect to the war abroad as well as enormous power domestically. This early stage of the dilemma was soon passed—quickly the sentiment of America crystallized upon helping Britain.

Then the question became: Either give the help to Britain directly, so far as practicable in the form of cash or credit, leaving upon Britain solely the responsibility for buying what armament she wanted and using it in such ways as she chose. The virtue of this course was that it would mean the least possible involvement of the United States—it would keep upon Britain the sole responsibility for conducting the war.

The other course was to give to the President the power to make and buy armament, and then to transfer it to Britain (as well as to other nations) in his discretion. This inevitably gives the President the power, and puts upon America the responsibility, which now troubles many. It was extreme, yet understandable, when it was said that by this course "Britain ceases to be a free agent"—meaning that Britain becomes dependent upon the President for supplies, and therefore dependent upon him as respects matters involving conduct of the war, if he chooses to express his judgment.

THE CHOICE was not as simple as is here stated, for some of the supplies Britain wanted were in the possession of our Army and Navy, and could only be transferred to Britain by giving the President power to do so. But the whole purpose intended to be achieved could be accomplished by a bill having two main provisions: First, authorize the President to transfer to Britain supplies owned by our Army and Navy. Second, as respects future supplies, simply grant credit to Britain, and let her buy such supplies as she wants, in her discretion and on her responsibility. This is the method that would have least involved the United States. So far as the United States wishes to avoid or limit involvement, some practicable approximation to this method would be the course to take.

The Administration chose the method that confers upon the President power over all supplies going to Britain. On this basis the original lease-lend bill was written. This bill and this method the Administration supporters in Congress adopted. But, having adopted it, they proceeded to limit it. The limitations on the President's power were not forced by the opposition; they originated with the President's supporters in Congress. Many of the limitations are practically adopted; others may yet be. With all the limitations, the bill will give to the President—and once this course was adopted it could not help but give—power and discretion which entail some degree of responsibility for the conduct of the war.

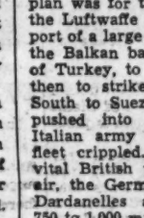
The Meaning Of The Balkan Pact

ALTHOUGH at odds on almost every other topic, the best authorities here agree on the meaning of the current Balkan crisis. Since Turkey signed the non-aggression pact with Bulgaria, and thus symbolically consented to German occupation of her neighbor, it has been generally expected that the entire Balkan peninsula, including Greece, would soon come under German domination.

German domination of the Balkans, whether direct or through Hitler's subordinate, Mussolini, signifies three things. First, Hitler will have achieved his ambition of a Deutsche Europa, a German Europe, in which he can fortify himself if his onslaught against the British Isles proves unsuccessful. Second, Hitler will have prevented the formation of a Salonika front, by forestalling Sir Archibald Wavell's plan to send a large part of his force to Greece after chasing the Italians out of Africa. And third, Hitler will be able to organize the Balkans for his own purposes, both as an important producing area for the German war economy, and as a base for air attacks on the British stronghold in Crete and on the British Mediterranean fleet.



ALSOP

The same able American observer who recently reported Winston Churchill's views on German grand strategy found the British war leader exceedingly gloomy about the whole Mediterranean situation. Churchill's gloom is not surprising in view of the above, and since there are also indications that the Spanish government is allowing German "technicians" and "tourists" to prepare fortifications and bases near Algeciras and Ceuta, on either side of the Straits of Gibraltar, Churchill, though glowingly optimistic on all other points, admitted that the next round of the war might end with all the Mediterranean lost to Britain, except the area of Africa now controlled by Wavell's armies.

NEVERTHELESS, the prospect of German domination of the Balkans is at least not so alarming now as when the Germans first tried for it last fall. Then the Italian fleet was still undamaged, and an Italian army threatened Egypt from Sidi Barrani. The plan was for the Italian fleet and the Luftwaffe to cover the transport of a large German force from the Balkan base, along the coast of Turkey, to French Syria, and then to strike east to Mosul or South to Suez while the Italians pushed into Egypt. Now, the Italian army is routed and the fleet crippled. To threaten any vital British positions except by air, the Germans must cross the Dardanelles and drive through 750 to 1,000 miles of trackless Anatolian Mountain range, fighting the Turks all the way. Later, perhaps, the Germans may soften the Turks into granting them transit through their territory, but for the present the limits of the Balkans seem likely to remain the limits of German land power in the Near East.

A sharp change in Turkish policy from bold belligerence to passive acquiescence, is what made German domination of the Balkans seemingly inevitable. The rewards were not great enough to tempt the Germans into risking a general war in the Balkans. Had Turkey and Yugoslavia jointly refused to accept German occupation of Bulgaria, the Germans would almost certainly have backed down. The Turkish-Bulgar non-aggression pact is viewed here as killing all hopes of resistance.

BUT WHY did the Turks change so suddenly? The answer seems to be that Russia played procurer for the Germans. Last fall, Hitler climaxed his diplomatic offensive ushering in the new order in Europe by the summoning of Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, to Berlin. He asked Molotoff to do two things: to make a deal with Japan, freeing the Japanese for an attack on Singapore or the Dutch Indies; and to bring pressure on Turkey, forcing Turkish submission to Germany's Balkan plans. For the time being, Molotoff put him off, or seemed to. Now, however, about a quarter of the original Russian army of 400,000 has been withdrawn from the Manchurian frontier. A Russo-Japanese trade pact is in prospect. And the Japanese are on the move in Malaya. Simultaneously, Turkey has been neutralized, with several indications of Russian pressure. In short, the Russians have ended by doing exactly what Hitler asked, and are expected to be given the Rumanian province of Moldavia and the Rumanian Black Sea ports as a reward.

As to why Russia ended by playing procurer for Germany there are two schools of thought, summed up in the persons of former Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles. The Bullitt school holds that with 70 German divisions on the Polish frontier, Russia is Germany's prisoner, and cannot be bargained with by this country and Britain. The Welles school has argued that a bargain with Russia was possible, and the recent suspension of the American moral embargo against the Soviets, though a mere gesture, was an expression of the Wellesian theory. Bullitt's notions prevail in Britain. However, since Britain had to make the real concessions to Russia, in such matters as recognition of Russia's conquest of the Baltic states and spheres of influence in Asia, the opposing theories were not fully tested.

KINTNER

THE ARGUMENT between the Welles and Bullitt schools will no doubt continue. Although the Turks specifically stated in their treaty with Britain that they could not oppose Russia, there will be much discussion of the rights and wrongs of Turkey's action. There will also be much discussion of the precise degree of Germany's Balkan power. But for those who are watching the war from this side of the Atlantic, the events in the Balkans are chiefly important as an obvious prelude of the main struggle now just ahead. The curtain is rising. The play may turn out to be one of those modern dramas in which the audience becomes inextricably entangled in the action.

U. S. Cruiser Miami

"One of the 23 new cruisers being built by the United States Navy will be named after Miami."—News item.

"Well, I just can't wait for that one," declared Elmer Twitchell today. "I'll bet it will have two-dollar mutuel windows under the gun turrets, a swing orchestra fore and aft, and banners all over it advertising the Pig and Whistle Batteries, the La Paloma Club, Joe's Stone Crabs, the Biscayne Dog Track and Capt. Dick's Turtle Steaks.

"I'll bet there's a fight going on right now to see whether Harry Richman, Sophie Tucker, Dwight Fiske or Miss Miami Beach will christen it."

Elmer chuckled softly. "Imagine a war vessel named Miami!" he continued. "You just can't associate the two things easily. But I think such a ship would have a fine influence in any war. The minute the enemy sailors saw 'Miami' on a cruiser their thoughts would swing to bathing beauties, cabana clubs, moonlight nights on white beaches, pink flamingoes and all that sort of stuff.

"I understand the news that a cruiser will be named after Miami has already started the chamber of commerce of other Florida resorts on the warpath. Miami Beach won't stand for anything less than a battleship named after her, and Coral Gables thinks she rates some sort of naval recognition. Fort Lauderdale, Hollywood, Key West, St. Petersburg, Fort Myers, Tampa, Daytona Beach and Kissimmee are all in the running, too.

"Palm Beach ain't doing a thing, however. She knows she couldn't get a thing from this Administration.

"I want to be around when the Miami is launched. It'll be an event worth seeing, if Miami has anything to say. Not just an orthodox launching, with some Senator's daughter christening it in the presence of five or six dignitaries. Nothing like that will do. Why they turned out the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Secretary of State, the Mayor, the City Commissioners, the fire department and the troops down there the other day when Deanna Durbin got off a train.

"They put on a pageant there for Jockey Taylor, Milton Berle or any pretty divorcee arriving with her third playboy husband. Can you imagine what Miami would do about christening a cruiser?

"There'll be a hundred naked women, scores of night club entertainers and all the best known racetrack figures at the launching. There'll be bands, fireworks, Hawaiian dancers, diving stars and noted golfers; and over all will hang the delicate odor of hot dogs, hamburgers, chili and sunburn oils.

"I wanna be there when she goes over," concluded Elmer. "And I hope everything won't be spoiled at the crest of the festivities by armed gangsters swooping down on the cruiser, sticking up the whole party and escaping with the champagne, the compass, the skipper's wife and the $350,000 pearl necklace worn day and night by Mable ("Patty") McGrunt, wife of Otto McGrunt, the millionaire oil man."

Passing Of The Hoosier Era

SLOWLY BUT irresistibly since Wendell Willkie started to expound that which he called his "p'litical flossfy" last summer, the realization has been dawning on me that I am at least two decades, and possibly three decades, behind the times in my concept of the Middle West, and probably of the small town almost everywhere in the United States. My mental picture has remained that of an unpaved main street, a town hall where wandering entertainers fired up the stove three or four times a winter to sing illustrated songs, a local weekly paper, an educational system which expired half-way through high school, a fixed population composed almost entirely of native Americans and a two-party political mentality which never heard of social gains and used the word "social" only as a noun, meaning an ice cream or strawberry party on the lawn of the M. E. Church. (In the basement in case of rain.)

PEGLER

THE HOOSIER remains a distinct breed, to be sure, and Willkie remains a Hoosier, but the scene has changed since he turned his back on Indiana, and anyone who still thinks of Hoosiery in terms of simple and honest but shrewd rusticity is living in the past.

I doubt that Willkie himself has really made that mistake, and suspect that his emphasis on open-faced, boyish political homeliness in the late campaign was something which the actors used to call hokum or hoke and now call corn. That was the last stand of the great American hick—may he rest in peace!—and Willkie was not a hick but a slicker. And the Hoosiers to whom he addressed this appeal at the homecoming show were slickers who had put themselves into costumes and a mood, as in some other local American festivals the people dress up in fur caps and fringe to recall for a day the civilization of the little brown jug.

A wise and honest Hoosier journalist of my acquaintance who covered the show and favored Willkie in the campaign told me in October that his fellow Hoosiers had corned it up so extravagantly that, far from arousing nostalgia in him, they had cured him of his old longing. His Indiana was dead and buried on the banks of the Wabash, and these people were frisking about in a very depressing burlesque.

WILLKIE'S own Indiana has become an industrial State with an industrial population which is urban even in the country. The factories and works have spread out beyond the old city lines, which used to be the demarcation between soft comfort and hardy misery, sophistication and chewtobacco innocence, 'way up into Michigan and over Ohio and Illinois. As of the period of which I retain a mental picture and which Willkie revived, only to discover that after such a long time dead, it had reached a high state of kipper, college education was largely restricted to the sons and daughters of the better-off and a few remarkably ambitious young ones of the relatively poor.

There is no need to cite statistics to show the extent of the change in this respect. But obviously the reason why the cracker-barrel philosopher is no more—not that he ever really was—is that he would be argued out of breath in an hour and would remain thereafter an affected and ignorant bore. I say he never really was because the few men who actually did business as cracker-barrel philosophers were really smart humorists who worked in dialect.

By imputing to a whole area of population their carefully exaggerated, professional version of the local language and thought, they gave all these people a chance to think of themselves as sally wits of the keenest intelligence. Even after they have been gone to the cities for years, some grown-up, one-gallus Hoosiers still conjure themselves as cracker-barrel philosophers when they get a little tight at reunions. But the effect is pretty sad, because it is so far out of date.

IT OCCURS to me that the syndicated cosmic columnist of our journalism might be regarded as the successor to the cracker-barrel philosopher, for I often find repeated, as original thought, both in speech and in letters to the editor, ideas, including errors, which I have seen before in print. I do not know how to square that with the undeniable spread, not to say necessarily the advance, of education, so I will neatly ignore the question and proceed.

My conclusion is that if Willkie had acknowledged the change in his native section and, all through his campaign, had emphasized the fact that the great American hick has been laid away in his celluloid Sunday collar and Sunday suit, he would have relieved himself of an awkward post and the campaign of an artificial quality which confused many people. He said mostly, and especially on the subject of war, just what President Roosevelt was saying, but the President spoke in Harvardese and Willkie in rube dialect.

Senate Committee Votes 375 Million More for WPA

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday unanimously approved an urgent deficiency appropriation bill furnishing the Work Projects Administration with an additional $375,000,000 for the present fiscal year.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee, indicated last night that the Senate may be asked to act on the WPA bill before it has concluded debate on the aid-to-Britain bill.

In addition to the WPA funds, provided in identical amount in the bill passed by the House February 12, the measure reported by the Senate committee carries $20,357,775 in appropriations for other Federal agencies, an increase of $7,217,775 over the House bill.

The Senate additions include $522,775 for the naval training stations at Newport, R. I., and Great Lakes, Ill., and $6,670,000 for defense housing.

Last Catholic Church In Moscow Robbed

Moscow, Feb. 14 (by Airmail to Berlin) (AP).—The last Catholic Church still conducting services in Moscow—St. Louis des Francais—was reported today to have been ransacked five times.

The Rev. Leopold Braun, American priest of the church, told Soviet police and the United States Embassy a gold and silver chalice, a gold crescent and two gold ciboria had been stolen yesterday, and that the church had been robbed four times previously—including last Christmas night.

Soviet Defense Chief Reveals Big Production Gains

Moscow, Feb. 19 (AP).—Nikolai Vosnesenski, chairman of the Soviet board of defense industry, told the eighteenth conference of the Communist Party last night that Europe's war is "a war of motors" and "to a great extent a war of reserves."

"Motors require high technical level and large quantities of oil and nonferrous metals," he said in a speech reported by Tass (Soviet official news agency). "The whole industry of the capitalist countries is being reorganized in this direction.

"The Soviet Union is bound to consider these technical, economic and other distinguishing features of the present war and adopt measures to equip its own national economy with advanced technique to keep the country in a due state of preparedness."

Vosnesenski declared in a review of Russian industry and production for 1940 that neither "the economic crisis in capitalist countries, nor the imperialist war, has arrested the development of Soviet economy."

Taking the 1929 level of production as 100, he rated Russia's 1940 production at 534 and United States production at 111.

Chandler Corrects Colonelcy Report

The Post, yesterday, in a story on the Kentucky colonels ball held at the Willard Hotel Tuesday evening, carried a report that when Senator Albert B. Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, was Governor of the State "colonels were appointed at a rate as high as 100 a day."

Through his secretary yesterday, Senator Chandler stated that during his first two years as Governor he had appointed no colonels "and very few after that."

He 'Curses Cute,' Women Say of This Jeeter Lester (John Barton)

'Jeeter Lester'—John Barton, who has played Jeeter Lester in 41 States, including the "Tobacco Road" company of Georgia itself, turned into the stage-door alley on E Street yesterday to enact the role for the 1,537th time. Barton curses off the stage as well as on, but in a natural sort of way that is not shocking

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

John Barton was in retirement, loafing at his home on Long Island, when he was asked to take over the role of Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road." That was in September, 1937. The Spanish civil war was raging; the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were on their honeymoon in Austria; Max Schmeling had just signed for a championship bout with Joe Louis, and Adolf Hitler was calling Josef Stalin all kinds of a dirty dog.

John Barton has been playing Jeeter Lester ever since. He has played him in 41 States, including Georgia—the locale of "Tobacco Road." He was afraid he might be tarred and feathered when he went down there, but instead he was acclaimed and feted. When he swaggered onto the stage before a packed house at the National Theater yesterday, and began knifing the air with his profanity, he was enacting the role for the 1,537th time.

Barton talked about himself and about Jeeter while he was getting ready for this matinee performance.

"I love the part," he said, as he got into his patched and tattered blue shirt. "In all my 50 years in the theater, I have never loved a part so much. Jeeter is simple and ignorant, but he has one redeeming quality—his love of the soil. That covers up a good many of his sins."

Was the Jeeter part a hard one from a physical standpoint?

"Yes," Barton said. "You know I am on the stage practically from the time the curtain goes up until it falls."

Pointing to his throat, he said the role was "——hard on the pipes."

Barton curses off the stage as well as on, but in a natural sort of way that does not shock you. He is a fairly devout Catholic. He sends along contributions to his pastor, Father Murphy, when he is on the road, and he puts on benefit performances for St. James' parish on Long Island when he is home in the summer time.

There have been Jeeter Lesters, so the theater people say, whose way of mouthing the sharecropper oaths has been downright nauseating. Barton's cursing is soft and less biting. Women have told him that he "curses cute."

"Tobacco Road" is, of course, primarily a serious study of the penniless and illiterate sharecroppers in Georgia. But with Barton in the title role, the play brings out as many as 198 hearty laughs.

Sometimes the audience laughs even at moments that Barton regards as solemn, as, for example, when he is sending Sister Bessie Rice and young Dude Lester away to get some "—— money" from his son Tom.

Some critics have said that Barton's Jeeter Lester is "too happy." The answer to that is in Barton's own personality and his conception of Jeeter. He looks upon Jeeter as a carefree soul despite his poverty. Barton himself is a buoyant, bubbling figure who, notwithstanding his long white hair, seems nowhere near his 65 years. Off-stage he wears glasses, and he can't see the audience when he is performing without them. But so lively is he that you wonder how he could ever have endured retirement if he had not been called to the Jeeter role when he was 61.

Barton's accent in the dressing room is not much different from his lilting drawl on the stage. There is an interesting story behind this. He was born in Philadelphia but spent a good part of his boyhood in Norfolk. In that Virginia seaport, he learned a lot about singing and dancing from the little colored boys. His father put him in St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore—Babe Ruth's alma mater—when he was 13, but he ran away and eventually appeared in a Baltimore theater as "The Pickaninny."

He was doing a song and dance act in Pittsburgh when he saw Annie Ashley, the pretty soubrette in "The Bowery." He gave her no peace until she married him. They got up a series of comedy sketches, including "Canal Boat Sal," and went to England. They expected to stay six weeks but remained 25 years. In 1904, while appearing on a bill with Sarah Bernhardt, they looked over at the royal box and saw King Edward VII, sipping a hot toddy.

(Incidentally, Barton's big ambition is to perform before President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Another member of the cast, Walter Ayers, has been writing encouraging letters to the President ever since 1933. He proudly displays the replies he got from Secretary Stephen Early.)

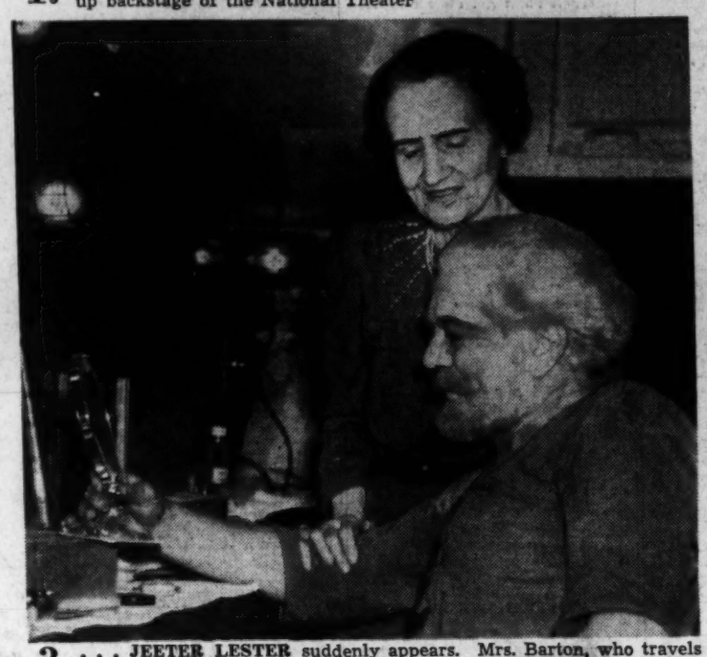
When Barton came home, his vocabulary included many such words as "lift" and "luggage." But his basic accent wasn't much changed. He went down to Norfolk and pretty soon he was a real Southerner again.

"I found myself saying such things as, 'Well, brother, I think I will tote this down to the river'."

When Barton took over the Jeeter role in September, 1937, he made Jack Kirkland and Harry Oshrin agree that Mrs. Barton could travel with the company. They have never been separated in 45 years.

"Tobacco Road" has now been in Washington eight times, and this time it is breaking all past records. What about the future? Will the Hollywood version of "Tobacco Road," now about to have its premier in New York, affect the road show? If it does, Barton will have a chance to use that automobile he bought in 1937 and which has been in his Long Island garage most of the time ever since, with a speedometer showing only 1,000 miles of travel.

1. "I LOVE THE PART," said Barton as he took pains with his make-up backstage of the National Theater



3. . . . JEETER LESTER suddenly appears. Mrs. Barton, who travels with the company, gives her approval and Barton . . .

2. A FEW MINUTES' WORK before the mirror and . . .

4. PULLS ON his patched and tattered costume. His long white hair is all that is not changed

Do You Want to Buy a Gas Mask? Maybe a Chair Would Be Fitting

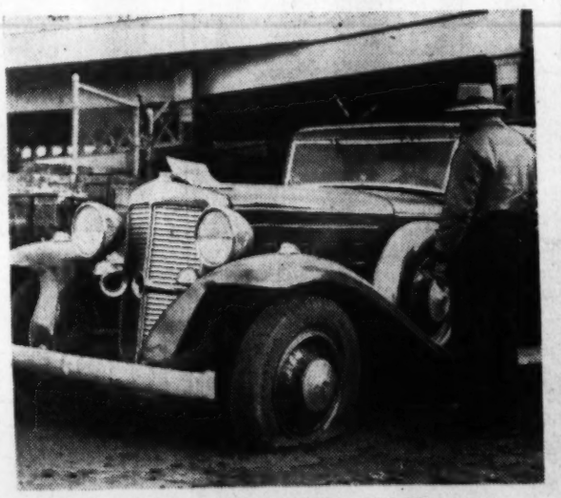
By George Thorpe.
Post Staff Writer

Piled high in a Federal junkyard is an eight months' flotsam of cast-off Government equipment that today will be auctioned off for what the citizens of Washington feel like paying for it.

The amount should run up around $15,000 for the goods to be auctioned—ranging from a 16-cylinder limousine formerly owned by Federal Security Administrator McNutt, to a pile of 200 or more War Department swivel chairs—cram every corner of a square block of junk yard and an adjoining warehouse, at Second Street and Virginia Avenue Southwest.

For every item of the officially-announced "worn, obsolete, and broken supplies . . . which are surplus to the needs of the Federal Government" there is probably a story.

The McNutt automobile, for instance: The Administrator brought the black, 1933 model Marmon, now resting dejectedly on flat tires, with him when he came to Washington to head the FSA.



16-CYLINDER AUTO ON BLOCK

HAMMER TO DROP ON SWIVEL CHAIRS

There was no appropriation for an official Administrator's car, so McNutt sold his to the Government for $10, and rode in it until Congress supplied him with the more modern one he uses officially at present.

The warehouse holds a myriad of goods, some of which because of its value is carefully locked up in wire compartments. Side by side are split-second movie cameras and radio apparatus, a balopticon, a delineascope, a pile of medicine balls from some Government gymnasium, a stack of 400 electric fans and a bulky electric generator.

Other items which will change hands after an auctioneer's "going . . . going . . . gone" are: a trench shovel, a dozen clocks, insect lotion, hair clippers, thermos bottles, spittoons, hospital operating table, a score of brand new auto tires, gas masks, ice cream storage tanks, a cafeteria steam table, a telephone booth, and so on . . . and on.

The auction will begin at 10 a. m. today at Second and Virginia Avenue Southwest

Army Figures Show Need of Dental Care

By Ida Jean Kain

IN SPITE of the urgency of the national defense program, Uncle Sam is firmly turning down one out of every four selective service prospects—because of poor teeth.

We have already been supplied with some startling statistics on the subject of the average man and his teeth. By the age of 25, it is estimated that he has lost four; by 30, the number increases to seven; by the time he is 40, he has probably lost as many as ten!

But the astonishingly high percentage of rejections in the face of a national emergency refocuses attention on the reasons for such a poor average. The dentists seem to agree on a three-fold explanation: An improperly balanced diet, the lack of daily care and failure to see the dentist at regular intervals.

In this last connection, there is the case of the determined lad who spent 10½ hours in the dentist's chair—his first visit by the way—getting his teeth into acceptable condition for service in the Army. A twice-yearly checkup is usually advised.

Vitamins Needed

In considering diet and its effects on your teeth, you may be inclined to think "Oh, yes, calcium!" and let it go at that. It is true that calcium, along with phosphorus, must be included in the menus in adequate amounts. But to properly utilize these minerals, sufficient Vitamins A, C and D must also be included.

The main objection to the tendency toward such a large inclusion of refined foods is not that the refined foods cause tooth decay, but that when they comprise the major portion of the diet, the protective elements are certain to be excluded; although the protective elements are necessary to general health, the teeth are one of the first parts of the body to be affected by a deficiency.

The most important role of the vitamins and minerals is played during the nine months preceding birth when the teeth are under formation. Formation of the teeth is begun by the third month and at birth the teeth of the first set—20 in all—are present within the jaw.

First Teeth Important

The idea that the first set of teeth are unimportant, because they are not permanent, just leads to trouble later on. If the deciduous teeth are lost too quickly, the jaw fails to develop properly and the second set is very apt to be crowded too close together. This crowding of the teeth is a main factor in their decay.

Incidence of caries in the second set of teeth reaches its peak between the ages of 15 to 25 and care of the teeth is most important during this period.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 34, Is Deeply Attracted to Man 10 Years Younger, Who Promptly Warns Her He Never Will Wed Her; Now They're Estranged; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About a year ago I became acquainted with a boy of 24, who is 10 years younger than myself. However, as I have taken excellent care of myself, I don't look much older than he. Although we were immediately attracted to each other, he told me right off that he had no intention of marrying me, as he had (so he said) "a career ahead of him."

We were together almost every night for about two months and there was a good deal of lovemaking during that time, so that finally we seemed to grow tired of each other's society and, by mutual consent, decided to discontinue the friendship. I went away for a month's vacation and after I returned, we gradually became friends again.

We did not go out as often as before, but the lovemaking was resumed and this seemed to bother him, as he is religious and didn't want to drift into a situation where he would feel obligated to marry me. Then, we started saying such mean things to each other that finally I stopped speaking to him for two months.

Now, another girl his own age, who is very sweet but not at all pretty, has made up her mind to "date" him, which she is beginning to do. She had been going with his roommate, but the latter has been transferred to another city, and now he comes to see her occasionally on weekends. This man once said that he liked me very much and that if we were better acquainted he thought he might love me. (I mention this to indicate that I am not unattractive to men in general.)

As for this man of 24—don't you think if he had really cared for me he would continue to see me? Or was I just a passing fancy? He once told my roommate that he thought, at times, that he cared for me; and yet, at other times, thought it couldn't be possible. Please advise me. LETTY B.

Freely Relinquish Unsuitable Flirtation

DEAR LETTY B.: This futile May-and-December dalliance appears to have been based on a "flash-in-the-pan" physical attraction. It seems you neither recognized nor sought to develop any further interest in common than a hunger for emotional consolation—and that the very haste and lack of reserve with which you proceeded to pander to this appetite quickly left both of you satiated and cynical, vaguely ashamed of yourselves and bored with each other.

It further appears that you have been the rather shameless aggressor in the unlovely alliance—and, in view of your 10 years' seniority, I think you may be held guilty of trying callously to corrupt the boy's morals and character, just for the sake of erotic adventuring. Had you conducted yourself far differently—in a manner more evocative of friendship than of sensuality; by amiably indicating the decade's difference in your ages, and using that as a basis for insisting the relationship must, of course, be sustained, if at all, more by mental kinship than by a passional exchange—it is likely that the boy would have learned to care a great deal for you. You probably would have won his respect, affection, admiration and permanent whole hearted loyalty—although, never, perhaps, his romantic "marrying" love.

Judging from stories that come to my desk—both in the form of written and "in-person" appeals for guidance from harried young men—you are typical of many thirtyish, and even fortyish, women here in Washington who fancy themselves not too old to pair off, lovebird fashion, with impressionable youths 10 or more years younger. And so they contrive to rope a comparative stripling into some sort of (to him) worrisome entanglement before he really knows what is going on. And thereafter he is torn between a desperate desire to run for his life and a melancholy notion that the jig is up: that whether he gets loose or gives in to the Lady Wolf, he can never feel entirely self-respecting again.

In my opinion, this loathesomely predatory attitude of older women toward younger men is almost "the unforgiveable sin"—since, if womankind has one supreme spiritual obligation toward humankind, it is to bestow upon all who come within the sphere of her influence a justifiable sense of enhanced self esteem; by giving them to see, through her attitude toward them, a glimpse of their nobler possibilities. And this obligation rests more heavily upon a woman with the passing of the years. Any woman of mature age who employs her knowledge of human frailty to undermine another's morals or self respect is well and odiously named a vampire—and her rapacious nature gradually comes to be written plain on her countenance, setting her apart from wholesome companionship.

My advice to you is: (1) to be glad this synthetic and unsuitable flirtation is over and done with; (2) to avoid, hereafter, any invitation or temptation to engage in a similar makeshift romance; (3) to "be your age," by restricting your list of potential or eligible beaux to men who are approximately your own age, or preferably slightly older, and (4) to maintain, in every sentimental relationship, always a margin of reserve and a considerable economy in the amount of light "lovemaking" permitted. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Few Plants Fire Workers Over 40

Business and industry value the services of the employe who has reached 40, according to a survey by the National Association of Manufacturers reported in the new "Primer for Americans." The status of the worker over 40 was explored in the survey which covered 2,069 empolyers with an aggregate pay roll of more than 2,000,000 workers, 311,592 of whom were women.

None of the employers discharges workers at 40, the study showed; less than 1 per cent show preference to younger workers when layoffs are necessary; 89.1 per cent have no maximum hiring age limit, but 38.3 per cent said they sometimes gave preference to workers under 40 where the job was particularly arduous.

Quiz Laundry On Tub Method; It's Important

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IT TAKES more than accuracy in arithmetic to make the best use of laundry service. Intelligent understanding of how your laundry can best serve you will be worth your while not only in convenience and economy but in longer wear from all your household linens.

The time to begin is when you buy your sheets and towels in the first place. Sheets will give better wear, not necesarily because they're heavier, but according to the construction, such as the thread count and the balance between lengthwise and crosswise yarns, so that warp and filling are equally strong. Selvages should be wide and strong to hold threads securely—the best type is the tape selvage, which has extra threads woven in to reinforce it. Sheets that are too small get extra strain in wear, and cause needless soil on mattress and blankets. A double bed should have a sheet 81 to 90 inches wide; a single bed requires a 63-inch wide sheet. All should be 108 inches in torn length.

Bath towels with too many loose pile yarns in proportion to the tight warp yarns will look stingy and uneven after a few washings, no matter how fluffy they seemed when you bought them. Watch to get firm warp yarns if you want towels that are strong and durable. Another reason bath towels don't hold up comes from single foundation yarns; the best wearing towels are woven with double or two-ply yarns. Still another "catch" in cheap towels is a too-loose weave of crosswise yarns, resulting in frazzled pile after short use. Be sure, too, that the towels you buy have good selvages that won't fray before their time.

In trusting your blankets to a good laundry, you are insuring their care immeasurably, for proper washing of blankets requires thermostatic control of temperature, of both the water and the drying rooms. Furthermore, a well equipped laundry is equipped to nap your blanket and restore it to its original fluffy softness by a carding or a glorified curry combing done by hand by experts. Blankets washed by a reliable laundry can also be treated with a moth-proofing agent.

As for sending chenille bedspreads to the laundry, well—that's like throwing Brer Rabbit into the briar patch. For the manufacturer pre-launders them before putting them on the market—to fluff the tufts by a special tumbling process, followed by stretching, which a good laundry does beautifully.

Meat Shortcake Utilizes Leftover Foods

AS WINTER months stretch out, it gives the urge to pitch the stove out the window and over the fence and skip away from kitchen duties. But let's take a tip from our grandmother. She specialized in inventing leftover dishes. She could make an end of roast and a cup of vegetables sit up and beckon for attention at the table.

Take grandmother's recipe for meat shortcake, for instance. It was mostly in her head—or in her fingers. We can be as smart as grandmother and make a shortcake farm style, inviting enough to serve home folks or guests. Make this nutritious dish and all you need to complete the main course is a big salad of greens, tomato wedges, carrot strips and grated onion. Toss it up with an oil and vinegar dressing and you have a perfect twosome of dishes. Here is the recipe for the successful service of leftovers:

Meat Shortcake Farm Style

Cut cooked veal in cubes to make 2 cupsful. Combine 2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons flour and add 1 cup milk to make a cream sauce. Add the veal, 1 cup cooked peas, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon paprika. Roll biscuit dough and bake in two layers. Place one layer of biscuit on a platter and pour the meat mixture over it. Top with the other layer of biscuit and garnish the top with bacon, paprika, butter squares and a tablespoon of cooked peas.

It's Green for Real Glamour This Year, Stylist Decrees

Hollywood, Calif. — Orry-Kelly says it's "green for glamour" this year. And that all the luscious shades of it, from cool mint green to hot Kelly green, appear on the color palette. So whether a girl is blonde, brunette, redhead or strawberry blonde, there's a shade of green to flatter.

But the stylist discards the standard bright tones for redheads, recommending instead the hushed, unassuming greens. A redhead, says Mr. Kelly, scarcely needs an added dash to her coloring.

For Joan Leslie and Geraldine Fitzgerald, then, soft lime and olive shades. Joan has a lime-green taffeta with large Chinese magnolias strewn capriciously over the bouffant skirt. Geraldine, with titian hair, concedes to advice by wearing a knitted dress with long tight sleeves and a skirt fulled only at the sides. A small suede collar and cuffs are edged with white wool rick-rack braid. Geraldine's turban, wound to great heights, is also of the olive knit. Then, for contrast, she carries a white wool envelope bag.

Capitalites to Sail Today On S. S. President Hayes

By Hope Ridings Miller

WHEN THE S. S. President Hayes lifts anchor and sails from Newport News, Va., late this afternoon, a number of Capitalites will be on board. Flying her flag of the American President Lines for the first time, the ship will sail up to New York harbor and will then be put into service as another around-the-world liner.

Hope Ridings Miller

Henry F. Grady, president of the line, had hoped to make the trip with a number of his friends, but his new duties called him back to his office in San Francisco and he left Washington by plane late yesterday afternoon. He came East a few days ago to appear as guest speaker at the Fortune Round Table at Princeton University Sunday night. Since then he has been in Washington for a brief stay. Mrs. Grady, accompanied by their daughter, Patricia, is still en route to California aboard the S. S. President Grant. Stopping off for a brief stay in Havana recently, they are now under sail again with Panama their next port of call. They plan to stay over there a couple of days before proceeding on to the West Coast, and a number of fetes has been planned for them.

But back to the cruise that starts from Newport News today. If you happen to be around Union Station at 11:30 o'clock this morning, you'll see several well-known Washingtonians boarding a train for Richmond, Va. There another train will be waiting for the party, and the next stop scheduled is Newport News. The President Hayes probably will pull out around 4 o'clock and will drop anchor in New York harbor shortly before noon Saturday.

In the company will be the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, who is returning to town from Princeton, N. J., this morning especially to take the cruise. (He spent yesterday in the New Jersey college town, where he addressed a luncheon meeting of the Present Day Club; was honor guest later at a tea given by the Institute of Advanced Studies; and then spoke again following a buffet supper of the International Relations groups of Princeton.)

ALSO IN TODAY'S cruising party will be Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, Dr. L. P. Nickell, of the United States Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Nickell; Stanley K. Hornbeck, of the State Department, and Mrs. Hornbeck; Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Deimel, jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, Thomas M. Woodward, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Woodward; Dr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stoner, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, F. W. Purdum, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Francis, Reginald Grady, son of the president of the line; H. E. Frick, vice president and operating manager, who will meet the party at Newport News, and D. F. Brennan.

RUMORS MAKING the usual Washington rounds have it that Jacques Truelle, former Minister-Counselor of the French Embassy here, has been taken under the "protective custody" of Nazi officials in France. Leaving here some time ago, en route to Rumania, where he was to serve as his country's envoy, Mr. Truelle stopped over in Paris to visit his mother. When he attempted to leave the occupied section of France, he was arrested. That, at least, is the story being widely circulated here. . . . Any day now orders will be issued to the effect that Lieut. Col. William E. Shipp, now serving in the Intelligence Division of the War Department, is to be sent to Belgrade as United States Military Attache. Before returning to America a few years ago, he served as Military Attache at Riga and before that, was Assistant Military Attache at our Embassy in Paris. Col. Shipp's new assignment hasn't yet cleared through the official channels, I understand, but a series of farewell fetes already is being planned for him. Incidentally, he's giving a dinner himself Saturday night.

FASHION FOLDEROL: Shades of Amelia Jencks Bloomer. That free-thinking feminist who suffered the taunts of practically everybody, including members of her own sex, when she advocated the Turkish-trouser costume for women back in the 60's, probably took several turns in her venerated grave yesterday. Amelia, you see, was almost hooted out of existence when she first appeared in ankle-length bloomers and a short skirt. But yesterday "oh's" and "ah's" of delight rippled through the throng at Anderson House when one model after another daintily lifted her skirt to reveal gayly colored pantalets to match their hats! Charles Creed, the designer, may have something there, but I doubt it. Anyway, the effect was amusing and something new in Washington fashion shows.

Prettiest hat I saw at the gathering was not on a model. It was a red feather toque, accented with a cluster of poppies on the front, and worn by Mrs. George Mesta, of Boston and Pittsburgh, who is spending some time at the Mayflower here. A smart tailored black frock and a sable jacket, were other accents for Mrs. Mesta's costume. Incidentally, Mrs. Mesta will be off for Arizona in a few days—it's a business trip, I understand—but she'll be back in town soon for the remainder of the season.

Fashion-Conscious Throng Show for French Relief

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, and Belgian Ambassador Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz at the Fashion Show yesterday at the Larz Anderson home

Jam Larz Anderson House to Ogle Styles; Lady Halifax Among Personages Present; Cecil Roberts, Frederic Lonsdale Speak

The Countess of Abingdon was guilty of "characteristic British understatement"—to use Cecil Roberts' own words—when she said the committee expected a good crowd for the French relief fashion show. Dressed to the teeth, the uppercrust turned out yesterday afternoon in droves. They were wedged into the magnificent ballroom of the Larz Anderson house like sardines. Every available bit of space on the graceful stairway was taken up, and fashion-conscious social lights even leaned over the railings of the balconies overlooking the ballroom.

Slightly ironic was the outcome of the door prize—a ladies suit designed by Charles Creed. With the room filled with ladies longing for just such a suit, a man—Hamilton Perrine—held the lucky number.

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, was among the early arrivals at the show. Following the show, tea was served in the dining room. A lovely bouquet of pink gladioli, carnations and iris centered the table over which Princess Boncompagni presided. Following the entrance of Lady Halifax the orchestra played "God Save the King" and when the fete was over the audience stood for "The Star Spangled Banner." Amusing speakers both, were Cecil Roberts, British author, and Frederic Lonsdale, playwright. Mrs. Henry Downe was another speaker. They were introduced by Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. Wilbur Carr.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count van der Straten Ponthoz, was among the few men attending the show, proceeds of which will go for the relief of French Refugees in England. Mrs. Warren Austin was in the throng as were Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. W. R. Kenny, wife of the Air Attache of the Canadian Embassy; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and her daughter, Eleanor, who chose to go without a hat; Mrs. Charles Dewey, in a red chapeaux and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege.

One of the models wore an outfit entitled "Embassy" designed strictly for Washington. The suit of black twill was worn with a champagne colored blouse and matching grosgrain hat. Mrs. Allan Moulton modeled a handsome blue and white checked suit; and others modeling included Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Emily Davis and Miss Nancy Hoskinson.

Showing people their way around the rather confusing mansion was pretty Miss Peggy Essary, who wore an Austrian-inspired frock of green velveteen embroidered in peasant colors. Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, wore a bright turquoise feathered hat. Others there included Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mrs. William Livingston Crounse, Miss Suzanne Kappler, Miss Betty Boschen and Mrs. Horace Williams.

Looking like a model herself was Mrs. James Alexander Lyon in stunning leopard coat and hat trimmed with bright green velvet. Others there were Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Prew Savoy, Senhora de Konder, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, with the inevitable white carnations pinned to her black ensemble; Mrs. William A. Morgan and many others. Among the young girls who ushered were Miss Marion Shouse, Mrs. Clifton Phillips, Miss Dolly Corbin and Miss Eleanor Flood.

Rep. Stearns, Wife Entertain

Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns were hosts at a dinner last night at the Sulgrave Club. Guests of honor were to have been the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopolous, but the latter is still a victim of influenza. However, her husband was present.

Engelbright, Representative Lawrence Lewis, Representative and Mrs. Sterling Cole, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Philip M. Thrift Shop Ball To Be Colorful Authentic Mardi Gras robes from New Orleans will add a touch of regal splendor to the carnival king and queen at the Thrift Shop ball the evening of February 25 at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. William Beverly Mason, jr. chairman of the committee on decorations for the ball, has the promise of robes, jewels and decorations, from Mrs. Charles Seyburn Williams, of New Orleans, who once reigned as queen of the carnival and whose daughter was selected as a queen in more recent years.

Green, yellow and purple, Mardi Gras colors, will be used in decrating the ballroom. Mrs. Mason and the members of her committee—Miss Kitty Hill, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Peggy Lansdowne, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr., Miss Billie Byrd West and Mrs. Moran McConihe—have been scouring the town and places out of town for decorations. They have sugar cane, bales of cotton, Spanish moss, miles of crepe paper and a thousand or two of balloons in the Mardi Gras colors.

Voting on the queen is already under way by members of the younger set, who are selling votes at parties and dances. The debutante receiving the largest number of votes, both in the pre-campaign and at the ball where the voting will continue, will be crowned queen. The four runners-up will be her attendants. The identity of the king is a state secret; even the queen will not know who her concort is until the final ceremony. Proceeds of the ball will go to Washington's six children's charities.

About the Town

NEW BOARDERS at Marie vom Rath's apartment are two guinea pigs. At the surprise party given recently for Prince Hebenlohe the guests were told to bring "something to do with pigs," as the Hohenlohes have just bought a farm. Someone brought the two guinea pigs, and when Marie vom Rath admired them, the hostess said quickly, "They're yours."

The pigs live in the bathroom and are fed rabbit food. The owner is so fond of them that she refuses to sell, but will board them out beginning today as she is leaving for a skiing trip. She will spend two days in New York and then go on to North Conway, N. H.

Marie is one of a group who are taking evening courses in first aid at the Red Cross. Others in the group are Kitty DuBoise, Mary Wright and Lady Maureen Noel. But Marie says that she did not keep the guinea pigs to practice on.

Two Authors Review Books for Penwomen

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

George Washington liked auction sales, too.

Yesterday Georgia Dickinson Wardlaw, author of "The Old and the Quaint in Virginia," who addressed the District Branch of the League of American Pen Women at its book review tea, revealed that the picking up of antiques at auctions was not a new fad. In the days of Washington, auctions were called "vendues," but they were conducted much as they are now and the F. F. V.'s came off with a glint in their eye and bargains under their arms just as their descendants do today.

In her book, which brings early Virginia to life in the tales its relics tell, Mrs. Wardlaw gives an account of Washington attending a "vendue" at the Belvoir estate, now the site of Fort Belvoir. The owners were returning to the Old World and were selling all their household goods. Among Washington's purchases were a Pembroke table, a Tambour desk and, the records say, he even bid on such trivial articles as pillowcases and pickle forks.

Mrs. Wardlaw, who came from Richmond to address the branch, was introduced by J. Jeune Carter, also an enthusiast for "the old and the quaint in Virginia" and both chairman of drama and corresponding secretary for the local Pen Women. Mrs. Carter interviewed Mrs. Wardlaw, bringing out other interesting stories from her book. Among them was that of two chairs she found in a home in Richmond. They were among 18 produced by a cabinetmaker in Philadelphia to accommodate the overflow of guests at the wedding of Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, and the famous belle of Baltimore, Betsy Patterson. After the wedding, the chairs were given to friends as souvenirs.

There was also the story of the silver tankard made by Paul Revere and given by the citizens of Boston to Edmund Hartt, builder of the frigate, Constitution. The tankard was kept in the family while a silver service, presented at the same time, is now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The author also told of dueling pistols she came across in a home in Norfolk, Va. They had been used in the duel between James Barron and the famous naval hero, Stephen Decatur, at Bladensburg, which ended fatally for the latter. This account was of particular interest to the Pen Women because they were among those interested in the movement inaugurated several years ago to preserve the home of Stephen Decatur, on Jackson Place, known as Decatur House.

Old letters which revealed the tastes and interests of Virginia's first and famous families were included in excerpts from the book, which Mrs. Wardlaw quoted.

Lady Gooch, wife of Gov. Sir William Gooch, while on a visit in England, did some shopping for Priscilla Bassett Dawson, wife of a clergyman—and, from the list of purchases in one letter, it is evident there was no Puritan restrictions on dress, so far as Virginia clergymen's wives were concerned. The list included "ruffles and tuckers, one fashionable brocade suit, one pair stays, one blue sattin petticoat, scarlet cloth under petticoat; one pair of blue satin shoes, fur-trimmed, one hoop, one pair blue stockings."

Mrs. Bessie Wilmarth Gahn, author of "George Washington's Headquarters," also presented as a guest author yesterday, reviewed her recent book establishing the authenticity of the landmark in Georgetown over which there had been prolonged controversy.

The tea was under the direction of Mrs. Theodore Tiller, chairman of book reviews.

There was warm friendliness everywhere, she said.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

MRS. HARVEY W. WILEY, chairman of the National Woman's Party and also of the Washington branch of the Save the Children Committee, has a heavy schedule this week.

Tuesday night she went to Philadelphia to speak on the proposed Equal Rights Amendment before a meeting of the American Society of Certified Accountants at Temple University. Each sponsor is asked to contribute $30, which will provide care for the child for a year. He is also asked to keep in touch with his "adopted" boy or girl by correspondence, giving it confidence that, despite the cruelty and privation of war, there remain kindness, mercy and friendliness in the world.

Mrs. Dunbar Speaks In Blacksburg, Va.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was in Blacksburg, Va., yesterday to address a joint meeting of the Blacksburg Woman's Club and other clubs of that vicinity.

Speaking on the subject, "One America," she described the good neighbor tour program of the General Federation in which the various clubs study the countries of the Western Hemisphere and stressed its value in promoting understanding which is indespenable to continental solidarity.

Last night Mrs. Dunbar remained to hold an open forum for the club women in which they were privileged to ask any questions they desired as to club work, both local and that related to the General Federation and its program.

Hitler to Move After March 1, Reporters Aver

Hitler will gamble everything on an attempt to invade England after March 1, and at about the same time Japan will strike at Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, in the opinion of war correspondents who took part in a forum on international affairs at the National Press Club last night.

Turner Catledge, of the Washington bureau of the New York Times, who acted as moderator, asked the question, "Will Hitler invade England?"

Robert Nixon, of the International News Service, who covered the Battle of France and the "miracle" of Dunkerque, said he looked for an invasion attempt any day after March 1.

"Hitler will come with everything he has—planes, ships and barges," Nixon said. "It will be the most gigantic effort in history. It's the only way Hitler can win."

J. F. Sanderson, who was in London for the Canadian Press, agreed with Nixon.

"I think Hitler will try it," he said. "When it comes it will be a terrific show. And I might add, I don't think he will pull it off."

Air Force Praised

James (Scotty) Reston, London correspondent for the New York Times, said there should be no worry about the ability of the Royal Air Force to fight a defensive battle against the Germans over England. The explanation of the R. A. F.'s success last September, he said, was the terrific fire power of the Spitfires and Hurricanes, which actually cut the tails off the Nazi bombers.

Ben Robertson, who is starting back to London this Saturday for the New York paper PM, told the Press Club audience that England was as well supplied with food as it was with courage.

Lloyd (Larry) Lehrbas, of the Associated Press, who covered the opening of the war in Warsaw, Poland, and several phases thereafter, shared the others' admiration of the R. A. F., but warned that the British fliers are going up against great odds when they meet the Germans this spring.

Wilfred Fleisher, of the New York Herald Tribune, who recently came back from Tokyo, said that the Japanese were in dead earnest, and that the United States would make a mistake to assume that they were bluffing.

Japan Declared Confident

"I believe in a month or so, Japan will make a drive toward the Dutch East Indies," Fleisher said. "I believe they will synchronize it with a German drive against England. The Japanese believe that the United States will stay out. They believe that they have a gambler's chance that comes only once in several hundred years."

Lehrbas, who covered the Sino-Japanese war before going to Europe, disagreed with Fleisher. He expressed the opinion that Japan would play a "scavenger" role, picking up whatever it could without actually moving southward until a German victory over England seems actual or imminent.

Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, asked about Britain's chances of victory, and Sanderson said there appeared to be no prospect of a British invasion of the continent until 1942, and then only "with your cooperation."

Robertson declared that neither Winston Churchill nor President Roosevelt believe an invasion of the Continent would be necessary for a victory.

British Search Out Weakness.

Reston said that Churchill had been greatly impressed by a passage in Mein Kampf, wherein Hitler said that if the great battles of the World War had been fought on German soil, Germany could not have stood it, and would have cracked up into several small states after the war. Churchill, Reston continued, believes that Hitler's genius is in seeing weakness rather than strength.

The British Prime Minister, he said, felt that Germany's weakness could be brought out by incessant bombing.

"But until the day comes when the British can equalize their air strength," Reston said, "they can't get at that weakness. The British are sure that the Germans have that weakness and will show it when they have to travel uphill. So the answer is up to the United States, which will have to send over bombers in thousands and tens of thousands."

The correspondents, six of whom are employed on news services, appearing in The Post, agreed that German morale right now is high. Reston told of Nazi fliers brought down in England who would crawl out of the wreckage and, with a terrifying fanaticism, cry "Heil, Hitler." Lehrbas told of a Nazi flier who crashed in France but refused a blood transfusion because he didn't want French blood in his veins. The flier, Lehrbas said, died.

Red Cross to Fit Out Another Ship for France

Another American Red Cross relief ship will be fitted out "within a few days" to transport $1,000,000 worth of milk, food, clothing and drugs to children of unoccupied France, Red Cross officials said last night.

The plan was revealed after a conference between Norman Davis, and President Roosevelt yesterday when the chairman of the national organization appealed to the President for aid in obtaining a ship.

Red Cross officials said the organization desired to keep at least two ships in constant operation in relief service. The British are prepared to relax their blockade sufficiently to permit the carrying out of this plan, it was indicated.

The mercy ship Cold Harbor, which sailed from Baltimore February 1, was at Cadiz, Spain, yesterday after weathering the hurricane which swept the Spanish coast. Her cargo of food, clothing and medicine for children of unoccupied France and for general relief in Spain was reported undamaged.

Several trucks lashed to the decks were swept overboard by heavy seas, it was said. The ship also carries 100,000 gift boxes for prisoners in German war camps.

The Cold Harbor reached Spain Sunday. She will proceed from Cadiz to Seville, Barcelona and Marseille.

The first rescue ship sent by the Red Cross was the American freighter McKeesport which carried a $1,000,000 cargo to Marseille last July.

Meanwhile, French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye expressed hope after a State Department conference, that a solution would soon be found to the problem of sending food to France "to save my unhappy country from a plight in which people are now actually starving in the streets."

Marseille, Feb. 19.—More than 1,000 school children have been designated by their teachers to go to the harbor in a body at the end of this month, each with an American flag to be waved in greeting when the freighter Cold Harbor, is warped to the Joliette docks.

When the Cold Harbor has discharged her cargo of clothing, milk and vitamins for the children of unoccupied France and of pharmaceutical supplies for hospitals, a committee in each of the French departments concerned will supervise the distribution, together with 15 American inspectors assigned by the Red Cross.

Groups Named To Survey Civil Protection Setups

Washington's civil protection committee met behind closed doors at the District Building yesterday and named three subcommittees to survey the city's police, fire and transportation setups. Details of the session were withheld.

Maj. Brown said that the job of subcommittees is to determine what is needed in the event of a public emergency arising from the troubled international situation. The subcommittees are expected to report back in 30 days.

Laid End to End They Add up to a Swell Idea
We mean these Four New Additions to the Buick SPECIAL Series that Give you Big-Car Thrill in less Curbside Space
Buick Prices begin at $915 for the Business Coupe *delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.
THE way cars have been stretching out lately, it usually takes only a couple of cars to occupy the curb space of an extension-ladder fire truck.
Not so with the newest additions to the 1941 Buick line.
Here we've reversed the trend—just to prove that an honest-to-golly BIG car can be built without going overboard on bumper-to-bumper distance.
The four new models now adorning the Buick SPECIAL Series fit neatly into modest garages without putting a permanent crimp in the doors.
They slip into parking places smoothly as a rowboat nestles up to a dock—and the way they flit through traffic is a delight to wheel-weary drivers.
When it comes to action—well, they've got a 115-hp. FIREBALL eight under their bonnets that skims you down the road like a mallard heading home. You can add Compound Carburetion at small extra cost and have 125 horsepower that does things we hardly dare hint about in print.
But they're a handy six inches shorter, bumper to bumper, than other Buicks—a quartet of top-quality cars in an easily-handled size that hasn't known such merit before.
The price? It's lower too, since we've passed on to you savings we make in trimming inches off these models.
Better take a look—it'll be the first time you've ever seen a really BIG car wrapped up in this bumper-to-bumper distance.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

House Wields Ax On Stamp Division

No one seems able to explain it, but the one Federal bureau that produces several times more money than it spends has been cut drastically by the House. It is the stamp division of the Post Office Department. The division has 95 employes and this year it is operating on an appropriation of $187,940. The House reduced its 1942 estimates by $65,000 which will mean separation of a third of its employes. Within the stamp division is the Philatelic Section which last year took in $1,425,546. Much of the income is clear profit as the division promotes the sale of stamps to collectors, and many of the stamps are never used. Moreover, the House has forbidden the department to print additional bi-colored air mail stamps. Bi-colored stamps cost $1.19 a thousand to print compared with from 24 to 40 cents for single color stamps. Last year 130,000,000 air mail stamps were printed. The House cut $100,000 from the stamp estimate and ordered that air mails be printed with a single color.

You probably never thought of it, but did you know that cuspidors are issued to Federal employes on the basis of their rank? Just plain ordinary employes are given either a steel or aluminum cuspidor, usually self-righting so it won't get kicked over. Medium-rank officials are given brass cuspidors, but big-shot executives, cabinet members for example, are given brass cuspidors with a brass pan.

War Department hired 1,500 stenographers, typists, and messengers during January, a near record. Civil Service supplies all the recruits. The only delay has been in getting male stenographers for the adjutant general's office, but hold-ups haven't been long. The commission has an open exam for male stenographers . . . The 3,000 civilian police for the Navy Department will be picked from the Civil Service Commission's general investigator and junior custodial officer registers . . . President Roosevelt has exempted from Civil Service two assistant directors of the Navy police force.

Able-bodied men to be guards at Treasury Department buildings are urgently needed. Prospects must be between 21 and 55 and must be at least five feet seven inches tall. They must be physically fit. Those interested should make contact with E. A. Schurman, superintendent of the uniformed Secret Service force, at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex between 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. before February 28. Here's the catch: the jobs pay only $1,200 to start and the guards are being worked 7 days a week temporarily. However, it's highly probable that Congress will approve a bill which would raise the guards' salaries and place them on a short work-week.

Civil Service registers established and the number of eligibles on each: Taxidermy aide, 24; senior cotton technologist, 13; cotton technologist, 29; associate cotton technologist, 46; assistant cotton technologist, 110; assistant marketing specialist, 23; junior marketing specialist, 41; safety director, 79; assistant safety director, 90; graduate nurse, Panama Canal service, 436.

Civil Service Commission is tightening up requirements for eligibility on its replacement list. After March 1 temporary employes and employes appointed pending establishment of a Civil Service register, won't be eligible for the replacement list. The commission amended the rules when it discovered "abuse" of the replacement list which was set up to give persons separated involuntarily since June 30, 1939, preference in defense jobs. However, the 9,000 temporary Census employes will be eligible for the list or employes in any other agency that are "temporary by law."

The commission is understood to have caught up with several departments that gave temporary appointments to persons solely for the purpose of getting them on the replacement list, and once they were on that list, giving them defense jobs. It is a known fact that defense agencies are hiring persons weekly from other departments by questionable use of the replacement list. Strict Civil Service advocates are sorry the replacement list was ever set up as it has become a handy vehicle to circumvent Civil Service.

Uncle Sam Has Last Word

Kansas City, Feb. 19 (INS).—When Stanley Lloyd Leonard, 21, got his draft questionnaire he mailed it right back to the draft board with the notation: "If you want me, come and get me."

They did. Today young Leonard pleaded guilty to draft evasion and was held for a Federal grand jury. "I guess Uncle Sam meant business," he concluded.

Cutting Shortcuts Short

Following up their warning of several weeks, park police yesterday arrested 10 persons for short-cutting across the grass between the Munitions-Navy Building and Reflecting Pool. Each posted $2 collateral.

Police say they have no brief with casual strollers but charge that short-cutters ruin the lawn.

Compromise Crosstown Bus Route Offered

A compromise crosstown bus route was offered by the District Citizens Association steering committee yesterday as the Public Utilities Commission closed its hearings on proposed routes to connect the northern sections of the city by bus.

Filing deadline is March 10 for briefs on the petition from opposing factions, Commission Chairman Riley E. Elgen announced at the end of the hearing.

Throughout the hearings Nathan M. Lubar, chairman of the steering committee, has indorsed the Military Road crossing of the proposed route from Westmoreland Circle, by way of Western Avenue, Military Road, Concord Avenue, North Capitol Street, Hawaii Avenue, Taylor Street, Twelfth Street, Monroe Street, South Dakota Avenue to Bladensburg Road Northeast.

Yesterday Lubar suggested a new route, in order to provide "absorbtion" of existing bus lines by the company, which in the last week has maintained if it must have a crosstown line it would prefer the suggested Klingle Road-Park Road route, since this latter route would permit the "salvage" or absorbtion of two existing bus lines.

Proposed Route Given

Lubar's compromise route would be via Westmoreland Circle, Massachusetts Avenue, Yuma Street, Nebraska Avenue, Military Road (along the route of the present M-4 bus line), through Rock Creek Park via Military Road, Fourteenth Street, Kennedy Street, Illinois Avenue, Webster Street, Second Street, Rock Creek Church Road, Warder Street (H-2 bus), Michigan Avenue, Monroe Street, South Dakota Avenue to Bladensburg Road Northeast.

From Warder Street on the route suggested by Lubar is a duplication of the route suggested by the advocates of the Klingle Road route.

Dean J. Locke, staff engineer of the transit company, who took up the greater portion of the day yesterday on the witness stand, denied the claims of Lubar that the company could salvage "anything."

"This routing completely disregards fixed habits of people living along these lines and I do not think the route offered by Mr. Lubar would provide any salvage," Locke asserted.

Calvert Lauds Lubar

He said if any service is provided across Rock Creek Park along Military Road "it should be a connection between the terminal at Fourteenth Street and Colorado Avenue Northwest and the Chevy Chase Circle."

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association and a member of the steering committee, commended Lubar for his presentation of the case but urged him to withdraw "the compromise" route he offered at the meeting yesterday.

In the earlier portion of yesterday's hearing Lubar stated Locke's testimony on Tuesday contained statistics "prepared solely for the purpose of opposing" a crosstown bus. Locke testified it would necessitate an outlay by the company of $105,732 to install a Military Road crossing and an additional $58,115 to begin operation of the Klingle Road crosstown route. Lubar said the company engineer did not attempt to show how much fares would be gained by either route, and Locke countered with "that would be impossible."

Robert Baker Gives Organ Recital Here

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Covenant-First Presbyterian Church presents Robert Baker in an organ recital Wednesday night. Assisting artist: Henrietta Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano, accompanied by Theodore Schaefer.

For the fourth musical Wednesday evening of the season in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Theodore Schaefer, minister of music, brought Robert Baker from Scarsdale, N. Y., to give an organ recital. The program offered by the visitor was not a severe one, but interestingly varied and attractive from the standpoint of the average auditor. Mr. Baker chose compositions which for the most part relied more upon beauties of registration than upon the full dymanic resources of the instrument. His purpose evidently was not the display of technical skill, but the disclosure of artistic sensibility.

BROWN

He began with Handel's F major concerto in which that usually stately composer indulged in the fantasy of imitating the cuckoo and the nightingale. This was followed by Johann Rinck's charming rondo for the flute stop and the transcription of an aria by Tartini. Bach was represented by the D major fugue and three chorale-preludes: "Ein' feste Burg," "Rejoice Now, Christian Men" and "O Lord, Have Mercy."

In his second group were included Franck's A minor chorale, a "Romance sans Paroles" by Joseph Bonnet, Seth Bingham's "Roulade," Louis Vierne's "Clair de Lune" and Henri Mulet's "Thou Art the Rock." One's pleasure in the music was enhanced by the absence of applause.

Mr. Baker's readings impressed one by their sensitivity and musicianly sincerity. There was no parade of prowess in his playing and no pose of the showman in his interpretations. On the contrary, his registrations were in excellent taste and his dexterity was subservient to the cause of art.

Between the organ groups, Henrietta Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano soloist of the church choir, sang effectively Beethoven's "Busslied" and Hummel's "Hallelujah."

D. C. Skating Fans Must Put Hopes On Ice Awhile

Despite forecasts of a 16-degree low temperature during the night, District skating fans are in for a disappointment unless the cold continues for several days, Park Police reported.

The mercury yesterday wandered from 19 at 6:45 a. m. to a high of 32 at 3:30 p. m., but winds kept the Reflecting Pool and other outdoor water from freezing.

Park police said the ice on the Reflecting Pool was thin along the edges and full of holes in the middle.

Continued cold and fair weather was forecast for today, with a high temperature of 32 probable, following a predicted low of 16. Snow may come tomorrow.

Blood Bank Drive Rises In Tempo

The worthiness of the Children's Hospital blood bank cause is being realized by sponsors of benefits for other projects as well, it appeared yesterday.

To the office of The Post yesterday came a woman, who must remain anonymous, bearing two $5 bills. This sum, she explained, represented part of the proceeds of a special event for another charity, whose sponsors decided it would be fitting to contribute toward the blood bank also.

The $10 gift, accordingly, was added to a coffer which is growing daily, through the generosity of individuals and organizations who are giving card parties and dances to keeping the Children's Hospital transfusion and serum service going for another year.

The Post, Station WJSV and the American Legion are conducting the third annual drive, whose national sponsor is the American Contract Bridge League.

Nearly 200 persons filled the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel last night in a card party held under the auspices of the Washington Bridge League.

Thomas Hanlin, president of the league, said that at least $250 was expected to be turned over to the bank as proceeds from the party. Paul E. Golden was in charge of arrangements.

At Children's Hospital, 108 nurses and guests played bridge, bingo and Chinese checkers. A return of $135 to the bank was promised. Miss Ashby Taylor, director of nursing, was in charge of the arrangements, assisted by Miss Verna Sauter and Miss Eileen Ihmsen.

On tonight's calendar are the party which will be given by George Washington Post, No. 1, American Legion, in Holy Comforter auditorium and the wrestling matches in Turner's Arena, 10 per cent of whose gross receipts will be contributed to the hospital.

The George Washington Legion Post, commanded by Charles S. Beilmann, was not only the first unit of the national organization but was also the first to take up the blood bank cause in 1939. Vice Commander Harry W. Brown is chairman of the 1941 benefit party, assisted by Joseph C. Abrams, J. C. Clarke, Edward Zuranski and Samuel Crump.

It was announced yesterday that Quentin Rosevelt Post, No. 11, has voted to donate $15 to the fund.

5-Cent Milk Plan To Be Continued

The Agriculture Department yesterday agreed to subsidize continuation of Washington's 5-cent milk plan for low income families until July 1.

A contract was awarded to Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy calling for a daily maximum of 10,100 quarts of milk to be sold to eligible low-income families at local distributing centers.

A similar contract expires March 1.

Citizens Told S. W. Is Free Of Vice Areas

Maj. Brown Reports Closing of Section To Uniformed Men Not Contemplated

"There are no red-light districts in Southwest Washington," Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, last night told more than 250 residents who met to discuss reports of military policing of the area.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, told the mass meeting that no closing of Southwest section to uniformed service men was contemplated "or has ever been contemplated."

Representatives of the two newspapers (not The Post) which had printed reports that "vice areas" in Southwest were to be closed, laid their stories to a misunderstanding.

Maj. Brown said he had called for reports from precinct captains on suggestions for controlling "bad sections" under an influx of uniformed men and that he had not read the reports when the area-closing plan was disclosed by the News and the Times-Herald.

In a brief business meeting, President Wender was presented a gavel by Orin J. Davy, of the Southeast Council, and the association urged construction of a fence around the Jefferson Junior High School, Seventh and H Streets Southwest, where the meeting was held, and asked improved facilities for the Southwest Health Center, at Delaware and I Streets Southwest.

A committee to work with the Southeast Council to drive for a bridge across the Anacostia at South Capitol Street was approved and the playground director was commended for doing "the most outstanding piece of playground work in the District" in connection with playgrounds in Southwest.

Sixteenth St. Highlands

Director of Traffic William A. Van Duzer told members of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association last night that safety islands are planned at the intersection of Fourteenth and Kennedy Streets and Colorado Avenue Northwest. The safety islands are expected to be completed by late summer, Van Duzer said.

The association went on record in favor of the erection of signs at the boundary of Rock Creek Park and city streets to point out to motorists the change in speed minimums.

Plans were discussed for the association's part in the dedication ceremonies of the Calvin Coolidge High School. The meeting was held at the Brightwood School, Thirteenth and Nicholson Streets Northwest.

Chevy Chase

A direct bus line from Utah and Nebraska Avenues Northwest to the downtown areas during rush hours was asked last night by the Chevy Chase Citizens Association. The citizens also appropriated $20 to the citizens' steering committee on buses to seek a cross-town bus on Military Road.

Inspector A. E. Miller, head of the Accident Prevention Unit, showed picture slides of some of the more serious recent accidents here and urged cooperation of the citizens in reducing the accident rate through an educational campaign.

A survey of Chevy Chase citizens' opinions on proposed roping off of certain streets in that area for roller-skating was announced. Results will be presented at the next meeting.

Dahlgren Terrace

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association last night went on record in favor of a local candidate to fill the vacancy on the District Court bench created by the resignation of Justice Peyton Gordon.

Indorsement of the Overton fiscal plan for the District, the Sumners-Capper bill to give the District national representation, and a plan of local self-government was voiced by the group.

An ambulance to be maintained permanently at the fire station at Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast was requested.

Warrant Issued In Cohen Slaying

A warrant for the suspected slayer of Miss Fannie Cohen, 56-year-old dress shop proprietor, who was shot to death during a holdup attempt Saturday night, was issued by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday.

Police declare they have identified the gunman, but asked that his name be withheld until his whereabouts is determined.

Corcoran Art Heads Deny Discrimination

Corcoran Art Gallery officials last night emphatically denied that racial discrimination had anything to do with the gallery's refusal to exhibit a portrait of Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, at its show next month.

"The painting was judged by a jury of professionals and it was found to be below our standard requirements," declared C. Powell Minnigerode, gallery director.

Minnigerode branded as "perfectly absurd," a suggestion by the painter, Paul Meltsher, of New York, that he was not invited to show the portrait at an exhibition here next month because of "race prejudice." The gallery director said that Corcoran exhibitions have often shown the works of and by Negro artists, and that a portrait of a Philadelphia colored pastor is to be included in the exhibit scheduled to open March 23.

In 1939, Miss Anderson was refused the facilities of Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution, an act which created a national incident. The singer finally presented her recital from the Lincoln Memorial before an audience of 75,000 persons.

Painter Meltsner insisted that his picture of Miss Anderson is "the best thing I've ever done," and said that it was exhibited in New York a few months ago and that "critics were enthusiastic about it."

Meltsner's portrait of Martha Graham, the dancer, was shown at the Corcoran biennial exhibition of contemporary American paintings two years ago. His works are part of the permanent collections of many museums.

Evangelistic Services

The choir of Calvary Methodist Church, Aurora Hills, Arlington County, will attend the evangelistic services tonight at 7:45 o'clock in the Community Methodist Church, Aurora Heights.

Adm. Moffett's BabyGrandson Sets Air Mark

In the best tradition of his flying family, 15-month-old Charles Moffett Mohan took to the air yesterday, broke the unaccompanied-infant record and, coming up to the finish with sleep-heavy eyes, accepted his accomplishment with a yawn.

As a final way of showing his casualness, a lovely blonde gave him a hug and Charles reacted by drifting deeper toward sleep.

When, without escort, the infant arrived on the 6:35 p. m. Pensylvania Central Airliner here the records showed him to be the youngest passenger ever arriving alone, certainly from any distance. Charles had come from his home in Knoxville, Tenn., 700 miles away.

The hostess, Miss Peggy Herrick, said he had traveled like a veteran, much better than many adults. It's in his blood. His grandfather, the late Admiral William A. Moffett, was first chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics and lost his life in the crash of the dirigible Akron, off Barnegat Lightship on April 3, 1933. Two of his uncles, George Moffett and William A. Moffett, jr., are Navy fliers. His father, Charles J. Mohan, is district traffic manager for the Pennsylvania Central Airlines.

The infant's trip here was to pay a visit to his grandmother, Mrs. William A. Moffett, of 2019 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. He was met by his aunt, Mrs. Janet Moore, of Alexandria, and a colored nurse on whose shoulder Charles soon passed off the whole experience by going to sleep.

Howard to Preach

The congregation of Waugh Methodist Church, Third and A Streets Northeast, at 8 p. m. today will launch a series of preaching services, with Clinton Howard, general superintendent of the International Reform Federation, as opening speaker.

Bill Offered To Broaden Pension Act

Ramspeck Gives House Measure To Cover Workers Not Now Benefitted

A broadening of the civil service retirement act to cover all Government employes not now entitled to pensions is proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Ramspeck of the Civil Service Committee.

Ramspeck explained that the amendments proposed "will bring under the coverage of the retirement system all officers or employes in or under the executive, judicial and legislative branches of the United States Government, except those covered by some other Federal retirement system.

"Elective officials," he added, "will have the right to decide for themselves whether or not they shall take advantage of their right to participate in the retirement system."

All persons covered by the amendments will have the right to retire at the age of 60 after 30 years of service and must retire at 70. Mandatory retirement, however, will not apply to persons in the legislative branch of the Government.

Government employes attaining the age of 62 years with 15 years of service may retire at that time.

The bill gives the Government the right to retire any person who is unable to perform satisfactorily and efficiently the duties of his position at any time between the ages of 60 and 70 provided such employe has served 30 years. If the employe objects, he will be accorded a hearing by the Civil Service Commission, the decision of which will be final.

The measure increases the contribution from 3½ to 5 per cent by Government workers affected by the law.

The President is authorized to exclude from the operation of the act any officer or group of officers or employes whose tenure of office or employment is intermittent or of uncertain duration.

The amendments provide that persons serving not less than five and becoming separated from the service shall not be entitled to a return of their deductions, but they will receive an annuity upon reaching the proper age.

Nats Arrive in Orlando; Start Work Today

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 19.—'Member me? The face is familiar, you say, but you can't recall the name? Well, I'm Povich, the guy who used to work in this space. And if you don't think those lines are coming tough, chum, try sometime to stir up a thrill for yourself at the end of a vacation. Today leaped right out of the calendar and jerked me back to the job.

POVICH

But while it lasted, it was wun'nerful. I met the nicest people at our house, including my ever-loving wife and two little tykes who are in great shape. I have been shot dead forty thousand times in the past three weeks by two little guys who have drawn a bead on me with everything from a pop gun to a junior G-man pistol. There were times, too, when I went down merely from a pointed finger stuck menacingly out of a little fist. I have been knocked off as an Indian, an outlaw, a German soldier or just a plain enemy to kid society. I have met my fate variously at the hands of the Lone Star Ranger, Jack Armstrong, Gene Autry and Daniel Boone.

Not only that, but I can now give you a decent impersonation of a choo-choo train (puffing real smoke), a bucking bronco, a human stepladder and a badly tuckered daddy. You'll never know what I've gone through, or perhaps you do. At eventide, have you ever tried to negotiate four nose drops in each nostril of a rebelling, squirming, kicking 2-year-old who knew what was coming?

If you've tried and failed, you'll want to know my technique developed during three weeks of applied experiments which ended in complete triumph for daddy. Here it is: First, very unobtrusively you fill the dropper from the bottle. Then you sneak up behind the young Turk, toss him on the bed and pinion both legs with one arm.

With the free arm, stick the dropper behind his ear, pencil-like, for the moment, and then go after one of his wildly flailing arms, never giving up hope, ten minutes later, when you've caught up with one of those arms place it between your knees. Thus you have accounted for two legs and one arm and are making very good progress.

Next step is to capture the other arm of your little patient. Five minutes is considered a fair elapsed time for this maneuver, during which you will probably be batted in the nose a half dozen times, but you will learn to take it. Anyway, you now have both his arms and legs helpless. So at this point, with both of your own hands full of screaming, squirming maverick, you call your wife, tell her to get the dropper from behind your ear and watch her give him the full treatment. It's a breeze.

Meanwhile every low-life in the Post Sports Department has been trying to thieve this column in my absence with his or her contributions. They've been taking a big wind-up and letting fly with their level best and it has been very disturbing to this department. Might give the boss some ideas, you know.

Even Clark Griffith took a shot at my job with a column written under his own signature. You'd think the old gentleman would be satisfied with the 30 grand a year he draws as President of the Washington club without trying to muscle in on my racket which pays only a measly twenty thousand a year.

It was amusing, though, to see Griff try to say something nice about his ballteam, which would be a good club with the addition of pitchers, catchers, infielders, outfielders and some power at the plate. The old fellow scored though, when he made his sidewise crack about the $40,000 salaries Detroit and Cleveland are supposed to be paying Buck Newsom and Bob Feller, respectively. Wrote Griffith, skeptically, "the Washington club will have as many $40,000-a-year pitchers as any team in the league," and he was telling the truth about that.

But I must tell you about Orlando. The place is booming and the natives are in clover. The defense program people are spending a million dollars on the airport here as a military base and the town is choked with aviators. The townsfolk are moving in with relatives and renting their houses for terrific sums. The real estate men are sporting 12-cylinder jobs and are working on their second million.

They're smoothies. You ought to see the house one of 'em rented to us. It combines the finest qualities of beaver board and papier maiche. If anything more than a zephyr comes along some afternoon our place is going to take off into the lake. They said I'd have all the hot water I needed, and I'm beginning to wonder what they meant by that crack. After all, I'm no Russian peasant.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 19.—The domination of the colored man in boxing has long been a topic, but the Louises, Armstrongs, etc., represent only a mild infiltration when compared to the progress of that race in track.

CONSIDINE

Looking back a decade, as we approach the annual national A. A. U. indoor track and field championships, one finds that outdoors and indoors, in the 60-yard, 60-meter, 100-meter, 200-meter and broad jump events, colored athletes have won 38 out of a possible 49 titles.

Here are the indoor 60-yard and 60-meter champions for the past ten years: 1931, Ira Singer (white); 1932, Emmet Toppino (white); 1933 and 1934, Ralph Metcalfe; 1935, Ben Johnson; 1936, Ralph Metcalfe; 1937 and 1938, Ben Johnson; 1939, Herb Thompson; 1940, Mozel Ellerbe. That makes eight out of ten champs. In the indoor broad jumping over the same period (there were nine such events) the colored boys won first place eight times. The boys were Ed Gordon (twice), Sam Richardson (twice), Jesse Owens (twice), Ted Smith and Everett Utterbach. The lone invader was Anson Perina, defending champion.

Outdoors, Ben Johnson, Jesse Owens, Eulace Peacock, Ralph Metcalfe, Barney Ewell, Mack Robinson and Eddie Tolan have given their race 14 out of 20 titles in the 100-meter and 200-meter track events, with Hal Davis, Clyde Jeffrey, Perrin Walker, Frank Wykoff and Jack Weiershausers the exceptions. In the outdoor broad jump Bill Lacefield, Kermit King, Jesse Owens, Eulace Peacock and Ed Gordon gave the colored boys eight out of the last ten titles decided.

The domination of high jumping has been about the same, but we've often wondered why the race produced so few pole vaulters or milers. Big Jawn Woodruff, a champion half-miler of renown, was supposed to graduate to the mile class but never made the grade, though hailed by some pretty responsible parties as an embryo 4-minute miler. Woodruff's in the Army now and will run with his regiment relay team Saturday night at the Garden in the national meet.

Speaking of milers, Les MacMitchell will run as anchor man for N. Y. U.'s distance medley relay team Saturday night at Madison Square Garden. The medley relay is composed of 440, 220, 880-yard races, with a mile tacked on the end. The N. Y. U. team isn't very good, except for MacMitchell. The chances are that by the time he gets the baton that his personal rivals in the last leg of the race, Luigi Beccali, anchor man for the N. Y. Athletic Club, and Andy Neidnig, of Manhattan, will each be a half a lap or more ahead of him. This will be especially true of Beccali, who has Gene Venzke running the 880 just before he takes off.

Getting back to the colored boys, Mozel Ellerbe is favored in Saturday night's mad 60-yard sprint (there is so little room left for the boys to stop in that two A. A. U. officials check the runners with a strong rope stretched across the track, just before they're about to run right through the wall and out on to Eighth Avenue). The broad-jump favorite is Barney Ewell. The white boy in this woodpile is Billy Brown, of Louisiana State, who has a pretty good chance to dislodge Ellerbe and Ewell. But only pretty good.

Rutgers, where man first began to die for his alma mammy, and where the seasonal malady of college football commenced, is the first college in the country to announce that it will schedule an Army camp team next fall. George Little, the school's director of athletics, made his announcement today. The Army foe probably will be a picked team from Fort Dix, where between 35,000 and 40,000 men will be stationed by the time the next football season comes up.

Rutgers' action strikes a healthy note. Most colleges have made up their schedule for 1941 and some of the bigger ones are booked for '42 and '43. But there are many open dates on the lists around the country, and the scheduling of camp teams seems like a perfect job of calking.

It was done during the World War. In fact, Harvey Harmon, Rutgers coach, after playing on three undefeated Pitt teams, coached by Pop Warner, met his first defeat when the Pitts got knocked off by the Cleveland Naval Reserves. Rutgers, with All-America Paul Robeson in the line-up, won a memorable game in 1917 from the League Island Marines, headed by Harvard's great Eddie Mahan. The following year Rutgers, with Robeson and Walter French, led the Great Lakes Naval Station team, maybe the roughest, toughest football team in history, by a score of 14-0 at the half. The naval station, which won the Rose Bowl bid that year, and had players like Paddy Driscoll, George Halas and Jimmy Conselman, won, 54-14.

Harris Has High Hopes For Zukowski

Rookies Shunted To Club's Special Boarding House; 2 Catchers in Lot

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 19.—They detrained today, tall ones, short ones, skinny ones—the rookie pitching crop of the Washington ball club—and if there is one big leaguer in the carload Manager Bucky Harris will be highly content.

The 1:38 from the North chugged into the little Orlando station only a half hour late, and Manager Bucky Harris shepherded a dozen rookie pitchers off the train. With them were two catchers, Al Evans and Dick Hahn. At the behest of Chamber of Commerce officials they hid their overcoats and posed for pictures.

But, save for Harris and two others of the group—Evans and Pitcher Walter Masterson — the sumptuous hotel headquarters of the Nats were not for the likes of the rookie batch. They were shunted up the street to the special boarding house the Washington team maintains for the lower-case lads. They will fare according to their reach.

In the group were five left handers, none of whom made the hotel. As for the talents of the lot, Manager Harris threw up his hands in a gesture of "who knows?" The fellow who is apt to get the longest look from the Nats' bosses is the shortest man in the group—one Alex Zukowski, late of the Nats' Greenville farm in the South Atlantic League.

Zukowski Promising

"On his record, this Zokowski must have something," speculated Harris hopefully. "He won 22 games with Greenville and they tell me that with better-support he would have won 30. We'll see what he's got. I understand he can break off a nice curve ball." Zokowski, who weighs 175 pounds and stands only 5 feet 8 inches is as easy to step over as walk around.

Tomorrow Trainer Mike Martin will rout the lads out of their trundle beds and shoo 'em into the ball park for the first practice at 10 a. m. The rookies will have the park to themselves until March 1, when the regular pitchers, catchers, infielders and outfielders are scheduled to report.

On his arrival here, Harris found three other players in camp—Danny Macfayden, the veteran pitcher bought from the Pirates; Catcher Jake Early, who now wears spectacles, and Pitcher Hardin Cathey, bought last month from Chattanooga. Cathey's stay at the Nats' hotel was short lived. The boarding house reached out and grabbed him late this afternoon. Sixteen players are now in camp, 14 of them pitchers. The complete list:

Chase to Arrive Early

Danny Macfayden, Jake Early, Al Evans, Dick Hahn, a catcher from Charlotte; Joe Cleary, a right-hander bought from Springfield; Walter Masterson, who won only three games for the Nats last year; Louis Thuman, a right-hander who made no great impression last fall; Bill Zinser, a right-hander from the Class D Kingston, N. C., team; Joe Beck, a right-hander who starred with Orlando; Carlton Twyble, a right-hander picked up from Springfield; the aforementioned Alex Zukowski; Joe Poydock, a left-hander from Greenville; Bill Kennedy, a left-hander from Orlando; Sam Cunningham, big left-hander from Charlotte; Joe Quinn, a left-hander from Brooklyn who was signed as a free agent, and Hardin Cathey.

At his own request Ken Chase has been given permission to report in advance of the regular pitchers and is expected tomorrow. Alex Carasquel, the lone surviving member of the Nats one-large Latin legion, will not arrive in the United States until the boat he is taking from his native Venezuela docks at New York on February 27.

Change in Roster

Harris today announced a slight change in the club's roster. Morris Aderholt, second baseman with Charlotte last season will not report here. They don't think he'll ever hit big league pitching.

Spurring on the entire training program is, of course, the hope of the Nats' bosses that somewhere down the line they might come up with, perhaps with great luck, "another Sid Hudson," who came into camp at this time last year as equally obscure as any of the current crop and blossomed as the rookie pitching sensation of 1940 in the big leagues.

Griff Unworried About Unsigned Nats' Regulars

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 19.—Completely unworried is Clark Griffith by the holdout tactics of six unsigned members of his Washington club—all of them regulars.

"They'll sign," said Griffith cryptically.

The balking are Pitchers Ken Chase and Dutch Leonard; Catcher Rick Ferrell and Infielders Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis and Buddy Myer. Of the group, only Leonard has, in the past, balked strenuously. This year he is refusing to accept what Griffith calls "a slight salary cut." Lewis is demanding more money because he is being asked to shift from the outfield to third base; Travis wants "a little more," according to Griffith, as does Chase. Ferrell is demanding the same salary he received last season.

They will not be classed as holdouts unless they have failed to sign by March 1, when they are scheduled to report to camp.

Mountaineers Beaten, 44-37, By Army Five

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Substitutes sparked a late rally that carried Army to a 44 to 37 basketball victory over West Virginia today.

It was Army's third straight triumph. The Cadets trailed by six points midway in the last half but Johnny Guckeyson and Georgie Rebh, reserve center and forward, aided and abetted by Dick Rastetter, began to find the range.

Army forged ahead, 32 to 31, with 6 minutes to go. Jim Ruch and Capt. Sam Mandich sank six points between them in the waning moments for West Virginia, but Guckeyson, Rebh and Rastetter also were too hot.

Army's defensive efforts greatly cut into the Mountaineers 48 points per game average. Ruch was the outstanding man on the floor, netting 16 counters despite an ankle injury.

Busik Stars as Navy Defeats Penn, 43-34

Middie Guard Scores 19 Points as Tars Take Sixth Victory in Seventh Game

Annapolis, Feb. 19.—The University of Pennsylvania, one of the Naval Academy's most time honored basketball opponent, was no match for the midshipmen quintet here today, bowing, 43 to 34, in a hard-fought game witnessed by about 2,000 spectators.

The Tars made the Quakers their sixth victim in seven starts by taking a big lead shortly before the end of the first half. Bill Busik, running guard, sank eight points within a period of 2 minutes and Capt. Roy Falconer also slipped in a score from the floor just before the whistle to increase the home team's margin at the intermission to 26 to 15.

Busik Starts It

Busik, high scorer of the game with 19 points, started the scoring in the second half but Penn then staged its last threat reducing the count to 28 to 23 before Busik again scored from field. After that Navy ran its margin to 37 to 23 and coasted in from that point although the Quakers held a scoring advantage to two points in the final half.

The Midshipmen tallied 19 field goals to 11 for Penn, but the visitors looped 12 of 20 foul trys to aid their cause. Navy netted 5 fouls in 11 awards.

Ball Handling Faulty

The Navy-Penn court feud, now nearly 40 years old, was marked by zealous action but both teams were over-anxious and the ball handling was faulty at times. Dick Martin, starred for Penn in the early play and was the main reason why the count was thrice tied. Coach Lon Jourdet, of Penn, started 3 sopho-

Rutgers Beats Maryland Five In Close Game

Maryland's luckless basketball five kept its record of no victories intact at College Park last night as the Rutgers University quintet upset the Terrapins, 50-45, at Ritchie Coliseum.

As usual, the Old Liners opened the scoring with Pop Wharton and Gene Ochsenreiter on the firing line. Frank Brock, Rutger guard, then tipped in a foul shot to make the count 4-1. Art Woodward, who took the scoring honors with a total of 15 points, and Norm Ginsberg dropped in two field goals to give Rutgers the lead.

After the Old Liners came back to take the lead the Rutgers trio of Sewitch, Ginsberg and Brightenback went into action and made it 20-16. Freeman, Rutger forward, struck twice and Maryland's Pop Wharton duplicated the act to leave Maryland trailing, 27-24, at the half.

Terps Open Scoring

Maryland again opened the scoring in the final session with a two-pointer by Art Woodward. With Bob Freeman and Ginsberg on the scoring end, the Rutgers floormen pulled to a 7 point lead. Ochsenreiter then flipped in two deep outside shots and Frank Brock, Rutger captain and guard, sank three field goals from the center of the floor as the Northerners took a 9-point lead.

Freeman and Brightenback then combined with three apiece, and the Rutgers crew held a 10-point lead. Ochsenreiter and Wharton put the Terrapins back in the game with two scores apiece, but Freeman continued to pour the leather through the hoop and the Rutgers crew galloped on to make it 50-45 and to break a two-game losing streak. The victory for the Rutgers five was their eighth against seven defeats.

29 Personal Foul Tries Mark Game; Colonials in Lead, 20-13, at Halftime

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

George Washington and Virginia played a football game of basketball at Riverside Stadium last night and the Colonials, proving that the system of throwing in baskets is better than the "meanwell system," triumphed before 3,000 fans, 44-33.

Replete with 29 personal fouls and the injection of two Colonials and one Cavalier, the game was as well played as a bruising encounter can be.

George Washington, winning its sixteenth game in 19 starts, kept alive its hopes of gaining a berth in the New York Championship Tournament with one of its most impressive victories. After a slow start on which they were held scoreless for 3½ minutes while the visitors made two free throws, the Colonials began to roll and were never headed thereafter.

With lanky Matt Zunic adding to his lead in the District scoring race with 12 points and Roy McNeil tallying 11, George Washington seized the lead in the sixth minute of play at 5-4.

Third Virginia Loss

Virginia, suffering its third loss in 15 games and, incidentally, its second in three ventures against Eastern opposition, never was able to get its "meanwell system" clicking against the close-guarding Colonials. Though Bill Harman performed up to standard by taking high scoring honors with 15 points, most of the Virginians had a very low percentage of goals per shots.

This was due as much to their own inexperience in shooting outside as the defensive skill of G. W. The "meanwell system" predicated on a double pivot and close under-the-basket shots didn't function against G. W. mainly because the Colonials deployed a man to stand between the ball handler and the man on the pivot. Thus so many passes were intercepted and broken up that Virginia abandoned its special style of play for long stretches before again giving it a try.

Visitors play hard

George Washington, counting most of its goals on set shots and follow-up of these long throws, led at half, 20-13, spurted in the early minutes of the second half to extend its advantages to 31-19, and then coasted.

However, at no time were the Colonials able to walk over their opposition who were gamely trying to beat a superior team.

Center Charley Jones and Guard Lou Veltri were put out on fouls for G. W., while Virginia lost Center

Green Hornet and Dusek Renew Wrestling Feud at Arena Tonight

Children's Hospital Blood Bank Shares In Receipts of Show

The wrestling feud started last week will be resumed tonight by The Green Hornet, hooded wrestler, and Ernie Dusek, the notorius "Boy Bandit" from Nebraska, at Turner's Arena.

The Hornet and Dusek will clash in a 90-minute time limit bout, and another packed house, similar to the 2,700 fans who saw last Thursday's grueling battle, is expected.

Through the generosity of Promoter Joe Turner, ten per cent of the gross proceeds of tonight's show will be turned over to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

"I am always glad to do my part to help in such a worthy cause as the Blood Bank," Promoter Turner said yesterday," and the wrestlers also are fellows who like to help out, too."

This rematch between The Hornet and Dusek promises to abound in thrills, what with the masked grappler seeking to erase the memory of last week's defeat. Dusek was given the fall in 30 minutes by Refree Casey Berger, despite The Hornet's vigorous protest that he was counted out with his left foot outside the ropes. Berger, however, said his decision would not be altered.

The Hornet asked for a new official. Later he said Berger would do, but that he wouldn't tolearte "another such raw decision."

A strong supporting card is on tap. Rudy Dusek, originator of the famous "Riot Squad," will meet "Gentleman Lou" Plummer in the semiwindup. Len Macaluso, former Colgate All-American, will face Ed Newman. Fred Grobmier, veteran scissors expert, will oppose Hy Kulkovich, and Joe DeValteau, French refugee grappler, engage Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis. First match is at 8:30 o'clock.

Army Calls Nats' Rookie Pitcher, Forest Brewer

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 19.—The United States Army has dipped into the roster of the Washington Baseball Club, Manager Bucky Harris learned today on his arrival at Orlando.

In vain, Harris stepped from the train at Jacksonville, Fla., to survey the immediate premises in an attempt to locate Rookie Pitcher Forrest Brewer, a Jacksonville boy who was supposed to make connections with the Nats' southbound train at that point.

When Harris reported to President Clark Griffith the mystery of Brewer's absence, he learned that two days ago the pitcher had been summoned to report to Camp Blanding, Fla., on March 4. His draft number had been called.

Brewer thus is the first member of the Nats to be drafted. He is a slender left-hander who was the leading pitcher at Charlotte last season and was counted as a big league possibility by the Nats.

Georgetown Bows to Penn State, 45-38; Late Rally Fails

G. U. Five Unable to Halt Big Forward

State's 207-Pound Johnny Barr Sets Record, 21 Points; Rizzie Leads G. U.

Special Dispatch to The Post

State College, Pa., Feb. 19.—Georgetown University waited too long to get started here tonight and dropped its third game in seventeen starts to Penn State's basketball team, 45 to 38.

Inability to stop the Nittany Lion Captain, Johnny Barr, was really responsible for the Hoyas defeat as the 207-pound forward hit the Cards for eight field goals and five fouls for his home-record of 21 points.

Barr was hot from the pivot and assisted in almost every basket he didn't tally himself.

Neck and Neck Battle

With both teams using an effective zone, the score was tied three times in the first eight minutes. Jim Kiernan opened the scoring in the first 30 seconds, but Dick Grimes tied the count at 2-all and the lead see-sawed until Barr tallied his first bucket and again knotted the tally at 7-7.

Here Irv Rizzi made good a free throw and the visitors went ahead for the last time. Barr put State ahead for keeps with a pivot shot from outside the foul circle.

In the last five minutes of the half Coach John Lawther's team, which had dropped an extra period contest to Georgetown several weeks ago, put on the heat and sewed up the game.

Hoyas Throttled

Barr, Elmer Gross, Herk Baltimore and Red Moffatt scored in quick succession while the best the Ripleymen could do for the remainder of the half was a foul by Schmidli and Engles midcourt shot with two minutes to play.

During the first ten minutes of the second half, Penn State effectively throttled the hard fighting Hoyas and rolled up a margin of 32 to 15 with Barr getting four more spectacular field goals and Bornheimer tallying Georgetown's only double-decker.

The Hoyas still had plenty of fire and in the final eight minutes of play considerably closed the gap.

With 12 minutes to go, State was in front 35 to 21. Schmidli's basket, which followed O'Grady's foul goal, gave the visitors some hope, and the 4,000 home fans groaned when Rizzi made two fancy shots from way out and brought the Hoyas up, 30 to 39.

Despite a closing rush, led by Rizzi, Bornheimer, Kiernan and Martin, the Lions coasted to their tenth in 15 games.

The Pepco game was a neck and neck affair all the way, with Mails and Files holding a 14-12 halftime lead. eather Bureau, with a 17-7 lead at halftime, had to fight off a determined rally for its victory.

In other games at Roosevelt Gymnasium, Naiman Photo defeated Retail Clerks, 38-28 Immigration defeated Calvary Methodist, 16-12, and Sixth Presbyterian routed Wallace Memorial, 34-10.

Kimbrough 'Somewhere' In City—Maybe

Texas A. and M.'s John Kimbrough was reported to be in our town last night, but his whereabouts—and even the fact that he is here—remained a mystery last night.

Jarring Jawn, who stood the National Pro Football League on its ear by signing a $37,000 contract with the New York Yankees, of the rival American League, was reported to have flown here via Eastern Airlines.

At Washington Airport early this morning officials recalled hearing of the arrival of "some football player," but couldn't say whether it was Kimbrough.

To Get Commission

The big All-American fullback, fearing that he may be called into active duty with the Army, is in town to confer with the Army general staff, it was reported. Kimbrough will receive his commission as a second lieutenant in the Organized Reserve Corps upon graduation in June and a six-weeks stretch in camp.

The Associated Press, quoting a story from the New York Daily News, said Kimbrough early last night was en route to Washington, but word of his arrival was lacking.

Rover Six Bows To Orioles, 5 to 2

Baltimore, Feb. 19 (AP).—Baltimore's Orioles vaulted back into the Eastern Amateur Hockey League again tonight with a 5-to-2 victory over the New York Rovers.

With Grigor and Ripley leading the charge, the Orioles piled up a 5-0 lead and then coasted in. Jack Dyte, Oriole defense man, made the first penalty shot the Birds have managed to cage in three weeks, late in the first period.

The Rovers rallied late in the game after Moe was sent to the penalty box and managed to avoid a shutout with Dotten and Dartnell scoring two goals.

Blozis Blames Opposition For Failure to Set Records

G. U. Shotput Champion Believes He Needs Stronger Competition; Confident He'll Deliver

By Jack Munhall.

Big Al Blozis, Georgetown's national shotput champion, yesterday blamed lack of competition for his current failures to establish a new American indoor record but hinted that he soon expects to hit his stride anyway.

It seems that the only weight thrower around who comes even close to the distances that the 240-pound Blozis reaches is teammate Earl Audet, a husky freshman who finished second to Blozis in the National A. A. U. outdoor championships last summer. And Audet, at his best, can't come within two feet of Al's tops.

Answers Critics

Answering for the first time the question that critics have posed while wondering if Blozis had attained his peak last year when he smashed records in wholesale fashion, the six-foot six-inch junior said:

"It's awful hard to do your best when you know you can beat the other fellows easily. There's no incentive to try. Still I think probably I'll do better starting Saturday in the A. A. U. meet, because I have been coming along more slowly than last year."

Blozis, whose best mark to date was his N. Y. A. C. meet record throw of 53 feet 11⅝ inches, revealed that on a practice toss later that evening he equaled his own American mark of 55 feet 8¾ inches.

"That sort of encouraged me," added Blozis, who also is a great football tackle, "and maybe Saturday I'll come through."

Meantime Georgetown Coach Elmer (Gloomy Gus) Hardell announced the probable personnel of his freshman one-mile relay team for the A. A. U. championship at Madison Square Garden. The frosh quartet, who'll run instead of the varsity because they run faster, will be comprised of Al Rogers, Lou Collado, Hugh Short and either Paul James or Bill Mulloy.

Great Relay Team

This foursome, even Hardell will admit, is the greatest freshman relay team ever to enroll at the Hilltop. It has to be to get the call over the Georgetown varsity relaymen who only last Saturday established a new N. Y. A. C. meet record of 3:21.8.

Hardell, while he'll never predict it, secretly believes his youngsters will trim N. Y. U., Fordham and the other crack college varsity teams. His frosh have run the mile in around 3:20 and expects to come close to 3:10 Saturday.

Georgetown's other probable entries in the National A. A. U. championships will be defending champion Blozis and Audet in the shotput, Dave Wiley in the high jump, and Jack Doolan in the 60-yard sprint. This would be the first appearance for Georgetown of Doolan, the former national interscholastic dash champion, who has been experiencing difficulty in rounding into condition after playing about four months of football.

Redskins Sign Jack Banta, Southern California Fullback

21-Year-Old Running, Punting Star Fourth College Draftee to Join

Jack Banta, backfield ace at Southern California for the past three years, yesterday signed a contract in Los Angeles to play professional football with the Redskins next fall, General Manager Jack Espey announced.

Banta, who stands 5 feet 10 inches, and weighs 190 pounds, was acclaimed as the best punter on the Pacific Coast last year. He was No. 10 on the Redskins college draft list and was the fourth draftee to sign. Al Kreuger, end on the Trojan varsity, was also drafted by the 'Skins. He has not signed yet but informed Coach Ray Flaherty he will turn pro in the fall.

Reds to Repeat, But Not Tigers, Combs Predicts

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Ky., Feb. 19.—As Earle Combs sees it, the Cincinnati Reds will win the National League pennant again this year, but the Detroit Tigers won't repeat in the American League.

Said the New York Yankee coach and former outfielder as he prepared to leave tomorrow for St. Petersburg, Fla., the Yankee training camp:

"I don't know whether the Yankees can win the pennant or not; too much depends on how the youngsters show up. I do know one thing—the Tigers won't win it. You can gamble on that."

BROWNS SIGN THREE

St. Louis, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Browns tonight announced the signing of three more players and said they would take Frank Grube, former Giant and White Sox catcher, to training camp as a free agent.

Grube, who played with Toledo of the American Association for a time last season, will be given a tryout in competition with the club's regular catchers—Joe Grace and Bob Swift.

The three men who autographed contracts were Pitchers Denny Galehouse, purchased from the Boston Red Sox this winter; Emil Bildilli, who won two and lost four last season, and Outfielder Chet Laabs, who hit .271 in 1940.

Meantime, the St. Louis Cardinals reported the signing of three pitchers. They are Ira Hutchinson, who came up last season from Montreal; Ernest White, who joined the Cards late last year from Columbus, and Elwin Roe, with Rochester in 1940.

PHELPS HAS FLU

Havana, Feb. 19 (INS).—Arrival of Catcher Babe Phelps to begin spring training with the Brooklyn Dodgers will be delayed indefinitely due to an attack of influenza, Secretary John McDonald announced today.

Phelps had reached Miami when he suffered a relapse and returned to his home at Odenton, Md., where he will remain until he has entirely recovered.

PHIL FRACTURES ANKLE

Philadelphia, Feb. 19 (AP).—Frank Hoerst, Phils pitcher, fractured his ankle today while working out with the high school basketball team he coaches. Physicians said the injury would keep him away from spring training for at least a month. Hoerst was farmed out last season to Pensacola in the Southeastern League.

SEATTLE GETS JOHNSON

Seattle, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Seattle Pacific Coast club signed Pitcher Sylvester Johnson, a 10-year-man in the majors who drew his outright release from the Philadelphia Nationals during the winter.

GIANTS PLAY GAME

Miami, Feb. 19 (AP).—The New York Giants were given a long drill in bunting today and then played a seven-inning intrasquad game with Manager Bill Terry pitching for both teams and Al Schacht umpiring.

The Hubbells beat the Schumachers 11 to 5. Johnny Wittig slapped two homers over the short left-field fence and Paul Dean got one.

Arlington Hall Girls Compete Against Boys

Intercollege competition will reach a new high in graciousness and good will when Arlington Hall Junior College girls lets McDonough Military Academy boys borrow horses to ride against them in the students' horse show at the Virginia girls' school Saturday afternoon and night.

Maj. L. E. Lamborn, head of McDonough, and Fritz Kleemann, Arlington riding instructor, have arranged the event with particular attention to the challenge team jumping trophy, for which a quartet of riders from each school will compete during the evening performance.

Arlington's representatives for the big challenge bowl will probably be Ellie Leh, Susan Rinehart, Sally Seward and Nancy Miller. With two of the team's regular mounts, Applejack and King Rock, on the non-active list due to slight injuries, Kleeman has not definitely decided what horses will go, but is tentatively counting on Applejack II, Golden Bow, Comanche, and Hilly Billy.

Other classes will be for various grades of horsemanship and jumping, student hunters, student hacks, pairs of hunters with one McDonough cadet and one Arlington Hall girl, and hunt teams shown under saddle and over fences.

Fred Fitzsimmons' Father Passes On

Havana, Feb. 19 (AP).—Freddy Fitzsimmons, veteran Dodger hurler, received word today of the death of his father, Richard, at Mishawaka, Ind.

Fitzsimmons received permission to attend the funeral but had not decided whether he would leave the training camp. Babe Phelps also cabled from Miami that he is suffering from the flu and planned to return to his home in Odenton, Md.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo at Home

Haight Goes Local

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

I always was a wrestling fan. I believe I told you about the time my mother gave me a quarter to get a haircut and I decided to save 15 cents by going to the Barber's College so I could get in the peanut gallery to see Bull Montana wrestle and how I got a freshman barber who let the clippers slip and how Prof. Tonsorial, after much deliberation, finished the job of cutting off all my hair and my mother made me wear a stocking cap to school so I wouldn't catch cold. Oh yes, and how I saw four episodes of the "Million Dollar Mystery," standing up for reasons best known to my father and me.

HAIGHT

Well, Boss, I was up to see Joe Turner yesterday and he was telling me about tonight's (Thursday) feature match, one fall to a finish, between the Green Hornet and Ernie Dusek.

That reminded me of the time that Turner wrestled the first masked marvel ever to appear here. It was at the Coliseum over the old Center Market at Ninth and Pennsylvania Avenue. They tell me that Turner threw him so hard that he crashed through the ring, through the floor and landed on a meat block in a butcher stand in the market with such force that a side of beef fell off a hook, landed on top of his prostate body and the night watchman, making his rounds by lantern light, tapped the side of beef and shouted, "the winnah and new champion!"

I found Joe looking in as good condition as he was when he used to wrestle several times a week. Never more than a middleweight, he tossed heavyweights around like bean bags. I remember one night he heaved Rob Roy Mackey into a box seat at the Lyceum Theater, the first and only time Mackey was ever seen in a box seat.

Turner started showing me some pet wrestling holds and I sidestepped, Boss. Wasn't any use hurting the man.

Joe has always had a tight grip on his opponents and a light grip on his bankroll. I tried to get him to talk about some of his charities and he simply popped up with another wrestling yard. I have often wondered how a fellow who apparently would tear off an opponent's leg and hit him in the head with it if the opportunity arose in a wrestling match, could be such a gentleman away from the mat.

He simply refused to talk about the fact that the Children's Hospital Blood Bank fund is getting a percentage of tonight's receipts, but he did go into another explanation of the Green Hornet's activities.

Joe tried to show me another hold and this time I grabbed him with a half Nelson. I don't know whether he was trying, Boss, but he couldn't break loose and that gave me an idea, so I says, "How about getting me a match Joe?"

He replied, "O. K. I'll match

A WHISKEY AS DISTINCTIVE AS YOUR Signature

The exquisite flavor of Hiram Walker's Signet is as inimitable as your signature—no other whiskey is quite like it. Try this marvelous whiskey—"neat," in a cocktail or highball... it will make your best-liked drink better liked than ever before! For Signet is aged five long years in charred casks that have been pre-mellowed by repeated prior use. It's aged in aged wood just as fine Scotch and Canadian whiskies and rare old brandies have been pre-mellowed.

One of the most expensive whiskies made in America. This whiskey is 5 years old. 100 proof.

Snow Ridge Wins by Length as Favorite in Hialeah Feature

Play House Is Second to Wheatley Ace

Hilfair Wins 7th, Pays $137 Mutuel; Plowshare Defeats Group of Sprinters

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 19.—Snow Ridge, from the Wheatley Stable of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Phipps, qualified for the rich Widener Handicap when he made his second start of the winter a winning one in the mile-and-a-quarter of the Atlantic City purse, for grade "C" horses, here this afternoon. The 4-year-old Diavolo colt, first successful favorite in six races decided, drove to the wire a length before J. H. Miles' Play House. James B. Campbell's Devil Crag, the close second choice, lost the place by a half length.

Snow Ridge paid $6.70 for $2 and stepped the 10 furlongs—same as the Widener distance—in 2:03 2-5 under 111 pounds, including Porter Roberts. The Wheatley representative last summer was disqualified twice for bearing in during the stretch drive, one of the setbacks coming in the Dwyer Stakes.

14,928 Watch

The crowd of 14,928 saw two other Widener eligibles in the field—Piping Rock and Sirasia—perform dismally.

Play House and Sun Mica, an entry, showed the way as named, with the latter first to fold. Snow Ridge was kept close on the trail and collared Play House as they entered the last furlong. Devil's Crag, as usual, lacked early speed. He drew up with the leaders through the stretch and there were some who thought he and the winner bumped. Snow Ridge clearly was best of the field, however.

Apprentice Sam Luce, just returned from a successful session at Havana, booted Hilfair to an upset score in the seventh, a turf course affair at a mile and a half. The combination paid $137.80 for $2. Grey Doll was beaten a length while holding Sweet Showno off by two lengths.

Hilfair, revealing startling improvement over recent endeavors, gradually moved up on the leaders, gaining command in the final drive. White Front, sixth losing choice of the afternoon, led for a half-mile, then folded up completely.

Joseph E. Widener's Plowshare won his first purse since last September when he easily defeated the sprinters in the 7-furlong, Grade "C" Handicap that was fifth on the program. The colt had shown early foot and stopped in his last effort, but today he was nicely rated behind the leaders, circled them turning for home and registered with three lengths to spare. His backers drew down $9.50 for $2. Dog House closed with a belated rush to head No Sir, the favorite, for second money.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD QUESTION, $16.30, $7.50, $6.00; AT LIBERTY, $3.30, $2.90; ISLAM'S ISLAM, $7.00.

BOLD QUESTION broke alertly, drew clear in the run out of the chute and held away to the end. AT LIBERTY, a trifle slow to find his stride, came with a rush through the stretch to shake off ISLAM'S ISLAM. The latter, a forward contender all the way, held on stoutly in the final drive. PRECISION made up ground in the final eighth.

ALSPUR, prominent all the way, responded well to punishment through the stretch, but could not reach the leader. SICKLE BILL, far back the first half mile, gained steadily on the outside the remainder of the trip and wore CAVE HILL down. The latter came through on the inside in the final quarter mile.

POLINA gradually bettered her position, finished with good courage and disposed of CALLING. The latter gained between the leaders rounding the far turn, but hung when it came to a drive. VIRGINIA ROSE came with a rush. HAND AND GLOVE stopped badly in the final furlong.

PRINCE DEREK, rated off the pace until rounding the lower turn, moved up steadily on the outside when called upon and wore AMNESTY down in the final drive. AMNESTY, a forward contender, went to the front with a rush leaving the backstretch, opened up a big lead, but faltered when challenged. PLOWSHARE, under light restraint while racing on the outside, closed with determination when placed under strong pressure and drew out through the stretch, but had little left at the end. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SNOW RIDGE, $6.70, $5.40, $3.30; PLAY HOUSE (entry), $5.60, $3.50; DEVIL'S CRAG, $2.70.

SNOW RIDGE, saving much ground to the stretch turn, where he swung to the outside, finished gamely and won going away. PLAY HOUSE set a fast early pace and held on with excellent courage, but was not the equal of the winner. DEVIL'S CRAG, rated off the pace, was blocked midway around the turn, but did slip through entering the stretch and then hung under his impost. BAR FLY finished resolutely.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HILFAIR, $137.80, $50.90, $19.50; GREY DOLL, $12.70, $5.90; SWEET SHOWNO, $5.30.

HILFAIR, going well up from the start and saving ground the first mile, came around the leader when straightened into the stretch, finished gamely and won going away. GREY DOLL, never far from the pacemakers, took command rounding the last turn, but was unable to withstand the winner's bid. SWEET SHOWNO, outrun early, began to improve her position in the final half mile while saving ground, but could not reach the leaders. CLARO had no mishaps.

DANCING LIGHT, going in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, took command entering the stretch, but was under extreme pressure to maintain his lead. FRANCES KEENE showed the most speed, but was unable to keep stride with the winner. CHIEF GAMBLE, slow to begin, circled the field the last 3 furlongs and finished with a rush. PETEE GENE saved much ground. QUAROMA could never reach contention.

Four Prep Rivals Clash Tonight

Gonzaga Five And St. John's Meet at Tech

Blair and Bethesda Battle at College Park; Tourney Bids Hang on Results

Two second meetings of old rivals tonight bring the scholastic basketball season nearer a conclusive stage, with tournament invitations hanging in the balance.

Gonzaga, enjoying one of its best seasons in years, comes up against the forces of St. John's in an 8:30 battle at Tech gym, and Bethesda-Chevy Chase engages Montgomery Blair at College Park at 8 p. m. The first tangle will decide the Catholic Prep title of the city if Gonzaga wins, and the second will put the Barons at the top of the Montgomery County heap if they win.

Despite optimistic predictions of both St. John's and Blair, neither game figures to be particularly close. Both Gonzaga and Bethesda won the first battles of the year between the teams, the Purple measuring St. John's by a 41-30 count and Bethesda laying out Blair, 35-21.

As usual, most anything may be expected to happen as the torrid enemies come to grips. But with fair luck the winners should be Gonzaga, which has won 14 of its 19 games to date, and the Barons, who boast 15 victories in 20 games.

The opposing line-ups will probably be, for Gonzaga: Franny Counselman, Buddy Rowzee, Bob Mulvihill, Hart Downs and Joe O'Lone; for St. John's: Buddy Spiess, George Hughes, Dick Hathaway, Chuck Dudley and Lio Healy; for Bethesda: Bobby Keene, Dick Poerstel, Dick Gaist, Duke Hashagen and Elton McClure, and for Blair: Nick Carter, Wimpy Reynolds, Enlow, Cassidy and Ridgeway.

Other games on the schedule today bring together Wilson and Coolidge and Devitt and National Training School. Both games take place at 3:30.

Wilson Teachers In 2 Road Games

Wilson Teachers College unit, pointing for the Newark State Teachers classic on March 1, will meet both Bridgewater and Shepherd on the road.

Tonight, the Owl sextet engage Bridgewater and tomorrow night they meet Shepherd. Wilson Teachers has defeated both fives in previous games here.

Mid-Atlantic Amateur Play Opens Tomorrow

New York's Orbachs Team to Beat; Heurich Gym Scene of Cage Tourney

Though powerful delegations from Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia will grace the lists of the third annual Middle Atlantic Amateur Basketball Tournament tomorrow and Saturday at Heurich gym, the team to beat, according to earlier reckoning, will be New York's Ohrbachs, A. A. U. champions of the Metropolitan area.

Ten local clubs, the cream of sandlot cage talent here, will be in competition, but every D. C. manager is building both his offense and defense in the hope of stopping the Ohrbachs. Washington representatives will be Adams Hats, Delaware & Hudson, Regal Clothiers, Bellman Fuel, United Typewriters, Petworth A. C., Alexandria Police, Arlington Maccabees, Jewish Community Center and Jacobsen Floristes.

Captained by George Garber, East's former great of George Washington University, the Ohrbachs rank as the strongest amateur club in the East. Five former college captains are on the team which lost by a 2-point score to the Phillips "66" Oilers in its first game of the season after two points, and since has slapped down such outstanding college and independent fives as Wake Forest, Newark U., Penn A. C., Davis-Elkins and the New York Knights of Columbus.

Outstanding on the squad are Babe Adler and Bobby Lewis in addition to Garber. Adler last year captained the City College of New York team, and with the Ohrbach's has proven his ability as an all-around ball handler under-the-basket artist. Lewis, a forward, was captain of the New York University team last year. He, just as Adler, is a mere 5-foot-11-inches tall.

Philadelphia's entry will be an All-Star high school team, and Baltimore will send its St. Wenceslaus A. A. From Pittsburgh will come the New Kensington five which won the Middle Atlantic event in its first year and managed for second last year.

Brewers Beat Bruin Five At Arena, 44-36

Before a capacity crowd, the Brewers defeated the Washington Bruins, colored professional quintet playing under amateur rules, last night at Turner's Arena, by the count of 44-36.

The first half was a nip-and-tuck affair, the game being tied at 7-all, when the Brewers spurted to a 17-12 lead, which the Bruins niftily overcame to lead, 20-19, as the half closed.

Bruin Attack Slips

For three minutes after the center toss opening the second half, the teams played on even terms. Then the Bruins' attack bogged down. While Dubilier, Kramer and Frankel were pushing them through the basket for the Brewers, the Bruins went scoreless until there were but eight minutes left to play.

The Brewers were 12 points in front and the efforts of "Reds" Briscoe, Tarzan Cooper and "Soupy" Campbell could not head off the heavier charges of Ben Goldfadden and Nat Frankel.

Eagle Five Loses Bart Reese For V. P. I. Game Here Tonight

American University, seeking its fourth straight victory tonight, yesterday had its chances dampened when Bart Reese, veteran forward, was benched by a sprained ankle. The Eagles play host to Virginia Tech tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

Reese injured his ankle in practice and will be lost to the team at least a week, Coach Staff Cassell said.

Cassell was forced to shift Capt. Dutch Schulze, regular guard, to forward and put in Bruce Etchison at guard to fill the gap. Starting with this duo will be Archie Norford at forward, Carly Byham at center, and Jim Hollis at guard.

V. P. I., which has compiled an impressive record this year, only Tuesday night defeated the powerful Richmond Spiders. The Eagles go to Ashland, Va., tonight to play Randolph-Macon, whom they already have defeated once this season.

Skeeters Win Over All-Star Sextet, 8 to 6

Special Dispatch to The Post

River Vale, N. J., Feb. 19.—In the highest scoring game seen at River Vale since their advent in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, the Skeeters defeated a picked team from the league by an 8-6 count. The game was played as a benefit for the Athletic Fund of Fort Dix. Twenty-five hundred cheered River Vale's victory.

Four teams nominated players for the All Star aggregation, four from New York Rovers, and three each from Atlantic City, Washington, and Boston.

The Boardwalk contributors were the most troublesome with Dunc Galbraith notching three goals, due to well-timed passes from teammate Leo Richard.

It looked like a certain triumph for the visitors as 22 seconds of the game saw them already in the van due to lightning-like team work by two of Boston's nominees, Ed Barry converting from Johnny Fitzgerald.

The game really was sealed in the second period when River Vale splurged for four counters as against the All-Stars' one. From then on the pressure was on the visitors, and the Skeeters were quick to capitalize upon any break that offered itself.

Lead by Bob Barrett, Georgetown Prep brought its basketball average to the .500 mark yesterday on its own court by routing Devitt Prep, 40 to 22.

Sherbahn Sets Record 448 At Takoma

Dutch Sherbahn, member of Happy Newman's famed Shamrocks, blistered the Takoma Recreation drives last night in the Takoma Duckpin Association's play with games of 123, 161, 164 to total 448 for the set and chalk up an all-time high mark for the loop.

With Sherbahn red hot, his Youngblood Hardware team took highs with 648 and 1,853. The second-place Takoma Ambulance took all three from Melvern Dairies No. 2, while Park Manor Pharmacy was dropping the odd game to Wilson Bros. thus cutting the druggists' lead to one game.

The Temple Minor loop at Northeast Temple was paced by Jack Hassett, New Deal Men's Wear, who had 153 for top game and a 395 set to lead his boys to high team set of 1,686. Bright Star Liquor, won team game with 607. Loggia Roma, Bright Star Liquor, New Deal Men's Wear and Camden Tavern each won three from opponents. Standard Brands, rolling a postponed match, took all three from Loggia Roma. Jack Hassett won a free entry in the Ollie Pacini classic Saturday with his 395 set.

White Tops Autoists

Buck White, Pohanka, was top game man with 164 in the Washington Automotive League at the Ice Palace while William Owens had set of 403 to take his A. A. A. boys to team highs of 610 and 1,701. L. P. Steuart won all three from Call Carl with Emerson & Orme, No. 1, doing likewise with H. B. Leary. Pohanka took a sweep over GMAC. The upset was, however, the A. A. A. boys who won the odd game from the front-running Arcade Pontiac boys to cut the latter's lead.

Bill Caul, Chemists team of the Bureau of Standards League, at the Ice Palace, tied the high set for the league with a nice 396 after his top game of 145. The Office quintet took all team honors after pinfalls of 621 and 1,712. The BTU's won three from Shop, while the Engineers took all three from Industrials. Chemists led with 15 and 6, with BTU's next with 14 and 7.

Al Gagnon Shines

The Interior Department boys at Penn Recreation were led by Al Gagnon, St. Elizabeths, and John Compton, National Capital Parks, with the former getting 165 for high game and the latter rolling top set of 414, following a near-high game of 146. Gagon was second high for set with 298. St. Elizabeths had top game of 635, while the Park boys rolled a 1,765 high set and took two games from the Reclamation Rebels. Grazing Secretary won all three from Fisheries. National Capital Park leads the league by four games.

St. Albans Five Wins, 31 to 20

St. Albans, right in the middle of compiling a winning streak, made it four straight yesterday by defeating Woodbury, 31 to 20, on the Albans court.

Led by Perry, who scored 13 points, St. Albans got away to an early lead and never relinquished it. Woodbury trailed, 31 to 20, at the half.

Meanwhile, the Friends School junior varsity was putting up a game rally on their own court to snatch a last 15-second victory over the St. Albans Jayvees, 13 to 11.

Buffalo Trains Here for Furr Go Tomorrow

Although it hasn't been mentioned much, what with all the argument that's going around in the fight business right now, Promoter Joe Turner would like to remind one and all that Gene Buffalo and Phil Furr are meeting in a ten-round battle Monday night at his Fourteenth and W Streets arena.

Buffalo will come to town tomorrow afternoon for his first public workout at the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest. Furr will follow the Philadelphia colored boy at 2 p. m.

Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh colored middleweight, meets Battling Monroe, of Buffalo, in the eight-round semifinal. Stewart, making his first local appearance in some 14 months, will make his home here under the wing of Harry Raskin.

Frankie Palmero, manager of Buffalo, yesterday informed Matchmaker Gabe Menendez that he intends to post forfeit money with the District Boxing Commission demanding a match with Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion, should Buffalo beat Furr. Gene is unbeaten in ten straight fights and won a decision over Zivic five years ago.

London Stocks

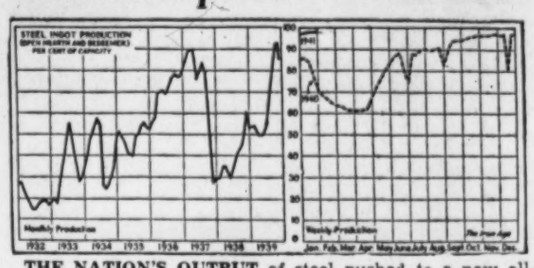
London, Feb. 19 (AP).—Announcement of increased dividends for four of England's main rail systems resulted in sharp gains for the carrier stocks and helped steady other issues in the securities market today.

London & North Eastern 2d preference jumped 3½ points. Great Western common rose 1. Southern Railway deferred ¾, and London, Midland & Scottish, ½.

Well-informed quarters in "the city" regarded the dividend boosts as due to a late decision by company directors to disburse the largest amount possible while funds were available. Subsequent dividends, it was believed, might be seriously curtailed because of war damage.

British government bonds finished with gains ranging to ⅛ point.

Steel Output at New Peak



THE NATION'S OUTPUT of steel pushed to a new all-time high in January. The industry in January operated at a rate of 97 per cent of revised capacity, as compared with 94 per cent in December, and 83 per cent in January, 1940. Average weekly output, 1,567,288 tons, compared with 1,469,197 tons in December, and 1,302,196 tons in January, 1940. Figures are compiled by trade publication, Iron Age.

U. S. Farm Income Sets 3-Year Top

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday that farmers' cash income from marketings, commodities placed under loans and Government benefit payments totaled $9,120,000,000 in 1940, or the largest since 1937 when it was $9,155,000,000.

This amount also was 3.2 per cent larger than the 1939 income of $8,668,000,000.

The income was divided as follows:

From marketing and commodity loans, $8,354,000,000, and from Government benefit payments, $766,000,000. Receipts from marketings and loans were 6 per cent higher than in 1939, while benefit payments were 5 per cent lower.

An 11 per cent decline in income from tobacco and slight declines in incomes from fruits and sugar crops were more than offset by increases in income from grains, cotton, vegetables and miscellaneous farm products. The greatest percentage increases were from flaxseed, hops, peanuts, oats and grain sorghums.

Income from grains in 1940 totaled $1,018,000,000 and was the highest for any year since 1929. The bureau said Government loans, by pegging prices, were important factors in increasing incomes from corn and wheat.

Income from livestock and livestock products totaled $4,818,000,000 and was 7 per cent hgher than in 1939. The greatest percentage increases were from wool and dairy products. The income from cotton totaled $659,838,000 compared with $628,575,000 in 1939.

Deduction for Depreciation

The Internal Revenue Code provides for "a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence." For convenience, such allowance usually is referred to as depreciation.

In claiming a deduction for depreciation several fundamental principles must be observed. The deduction must be confined to property actually used in a trade, business, or profession, and to improvements on real property, other than property used by the taxpayer as his personal residence. In general, it applies to the taxpayer's capital assets—building, machinery, etc.—the cost of which cannot be deducted as a business expense.

A lawyer, doctor, or other professional man may not charge off as a current expense the cost of a library used wholly in his profession, this being a capital expenditure and the library a capital asset; but he may deduct an allowance for depreciation based upon the useful life of the library.

If part of a professional man's residence is used by him for office purposes, a proportionate amount of the depreciation sustained may be deducted, based generally on the ratio of the number of rooms used for such purposes to the total number of rooms in the building. The same principle applies if a taxpayer rents to others a portion of his residence. Under such conditions, however, the taxpayer must include in his gross income the rentals received.

Tin and Rubber Shoot Forward On Orient News

By the Associated Press

Tin and rubber shot far ahead of a general advance among commodities for future delivery as the way was paved for action in the Far East beyond diplomatic exchanges.

In the New York market tin gained nearly a full cent a pound and rubber rose an outside of ½ cent a pound. With this Nation almost wholly dependent on the Orient for supplies of these two vital defense materials, traders said, disturbances in the Far East threatened to disrupt shipping facilities.

Even silk, which has lagged far behind other recently advancing staples, rose 1 to 3½ cents a pound.

At Chicago wheat broke through frequent opposition to gain ½ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel. Buying was fostered in part by a cold wave spreading over the grain belt. Corn added 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel.

Mill and trade demand sent cotton at New York up 10 to 40 cents a bale. Zinc and copper rose against a background of short spot supplies. Hides stepped ahead 1-5 to 2-5 of a cent a pound. British buyers were believed active in the Argentine hide market, where the United States buys heavily.

Martin Bomber Plant to Operate In Seven Months

Omaha, Nebr., Feb. 19 (AP).—Paul E. Tignor, chief construction engineer for the Glen L. Martin Co. of Baltimore, said here today the Fort Crook bomber plant should be ready to assemble bombing planes in seven months unless something unforeseen develops.

Tignor conferred here with Maj. Helmer Swenholt, Army district engineer in charge of construction.

A list of machinery for the plant has been drawn up, Tignor said, and the Chrysler plant in Detroit will be ready to deliver parts when the Omaha plant is open.

Cost of the plant, which will cover six city blocks, was estimated at $10,300,000. Approximately 2,500 men will be needed in the construction work, and about 8,000 when the plant is opened in assembly work and manufacture of some parts here, Tignor declared.

Metropolitan Club Investor 'Delighted' With 1940 Report

TO THE FINANCIAL EDITOR, The Washington Post.

As a holder of some of the 2 per cent debentures recently extended from January 1, 1941, for a period of five years at 2 per cent interest, I can say that I was delighted with the report of the Metropolitan Club just published. Do you know of any market for the 2 per cent irredeemable notes? I say irredeemable because it seems when they come due they get extended.

I do not like to put to George Garrett, the eminent financier, who is president of the club, any embarrassing questions, so I am asking you if you can find out what is the prospect for redemption of our debentures of fixed but also uncertain and indeterminate maturity?

I notice a little selling in the annual report, where it is indicated that only a few memberships are left. That ought to bring in applications if anything could do it, especially when taken along with the deatils of the strain now falling upon the kitchen. The latter item ought to make life easier for the wives of the officers and members of the club.

The report states that a contract has been let for the construction of a fully equipped bar in the green on the second floor, soon to be ready. It seems to me that the card room on the third floor might make a better place, because it is larger and hardly anyone in the club seems to care to play bridge these days. I may add that most of those who do attend the card room now don't play much of a game compared to what it used to be in glorious days past. The economies of the card room do not look sound to me, as a noteholder.

Finally, if the directors would appropriate a small amount of money for the redemption of the notes of fixed but uncertain maturity, I believe they could get in quite a lot of their irredeemable currency at a very handsome profit. In any event, I know where some are available at a very reasonable price and no doubt many offers could be had by inviting tenders. INVESTOR.

Stock Prices Continue Weak in Face Of Commodity Upsurge; Trading Heavier

New York, Feb. 19.—Security markets resumed the decline today and many shares sold at the lowest this year in contrast with a rise in commodities on the Far Eastern war threat.

Such imported materials as rubber, tin, pepper and silk were the fastest movers on the advance. They appeared under accumulation on chances shipments might be interrupted by the gathering crisis in the Orient, spotlighted by reinforcement of Singapore defenses and utterances of Japanese spokesmen.

As in previous sessions of falling stocks and bonds, Wall Street was concerned partly with calculation of what the United States' shift toward a war economy would mean in way of higher taxes and restrictions on normal business activities. Tightening of Government controls over certain supply bottlenecks to give defense industry the right of way drew attention to the growing concentration on arms production.

Government supervision, it was noted in trade reports, covered both price limitation and rationing of supply, mostly on a voluntary basis of cooperation with producers.

Despite the huge defense order backlogs in aircraft, shipbuilding and kindred industries, share prices in those groups were marked down with the general list.

Off fractions to more than a point at the finish were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, DuPont, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Boeing, Anaconda, Kennecott and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

American Telephone fell 2, ending at 156¾. American Airlines lost 2¾ at 40½.

Brokers pointed out numerous stocks representative of the more stable profit-making industries, including public utilities, have fallen persistently in recent weeks in the shadow of higher taxes and possibilities the United States might become more deeply involved in the world conflict.

The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks finished at 39.0, almost duplicating the 1941 bottom made last week, which was the lowest since the collapse of France in June, 1940. Transactions increased to 465,430 shares from 320,050 yesterday.

In the Curb Exchange, losses of fractions to more than a point appeared in Aluminum of America, American Gas & Electric, Le Tourneau, New Jersey Zinc and Sherwin Williams. Montgomery Ward A broke 9 to 156 on a small turnover.

Curb volume expanded to 105,000 shares compared with 93,000 the previous day.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—The wheat market's recovery, inaugurated yesterday on strength of short covering and scattered mill buying, was extended almost a cent a bushel today despite a sharp midsession setback.

Spreading cold weather over much of the grain belt, small scale mill purchase and reduced receipts at principal terminals were constructive factors.

Prices rose ½ cent at the start, then fell about a cent, largely reflecting weakness of securities, but rallied again in the final hour to close ⅛-¾ higher than yesterday. May 79¾@79¾, July 75. Corn finished 1⅜ higher, May 61⅝, July 60⅛; oats ¾-⅞ up; rye ⅞-1⅛ lower; soybeans 1¼-1½ higher and lard 8-10 higher.

The cold wave, apparently more severe over the soft winter wheat belt than in the Southwest, was expected to be prolonged, with temperatures likely to recede in the latter area. However, some rain or snow was reported at several points in the Southwest.

SEC Witness Says Public Not Harmed By Fee-Splitting

By the Associated Press

Clarence Bettman, former chairman of the board of governors of the New York Curb Exchange, testified at a Securities Commission hearing yesterday that while commission-splitting "is detrimental to the best interests of the exchange the public is not hurt by it."

He was a witness at the commission's investigation of the manner in which the curb punishes members who violate its rules.

Bettman, a member of the firm of Connell and Bettman, said he believed very few members of the exchange were "willing to split commission." Commission splitting is a violation of the regulations and punishable by suspension or expulsion.

The SEC contends that the exchange failed to take proper action against J. C. Cuppia and other members who were alleged to have engaged in commission splitting and other rebating arrangements among members.

Rail Plan Extended

Cleveland, Feb. 19 (AP).—Directors of the Nickel Plate Railroad have extended from February 28 to March 31 the time for accepting the company's plan to retire $12,678,750 of 3-year, 6 per cent notes due next October 1.

Sugar Futures

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Trade forecasts of an early advance in refined sugar gave impetus to the current thrust ahead in domestic sugar futures. Distant deliveries reached the season's top marks and the list generally gained 1 to 2 points on sales of 13,300 tons.

World futures ended ⅛ higher to 1 lower, but sales amounted to only 3,000 tons; March, .68†; May, .72†.

In the raw market, 6,000 bags of Puerto Ricans clearing February 27 sold at 3 cents a pound. Only one lot was available later at this price, with other offerings scaled up to 3.10 cents.

Good demand appeared for refined locally at the unchanged price of 4.45 cents a pound.

Prices of Wool Soar on Record Consumption

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 19.—Record consumption of wool and prospects that still greater quantities will be required to meet Government and civilian needs in the defense program, have accompanied a price rise to the highest in modern history.

Domestic greasy wool prices have advanced 1 to 2 cents a pound within the past few days, an amount equivalent to 2 to 5 cents a pound on a scored basis. Some quarters of the textile field openly assert the price is likely to be strained severely within the next month when the U. S. Army comes into the market for in excess of 100,000,000 pounds of grease wool for uniforms. Such a tonnage would constitute the Army's largest single purchase of wool thus far in the defense program.

$1.27 a Pound

The current price of raw scoured wool is around $1.27 a pound, the highest since records have been kept of organized markets. The March delivery on the New York Wool Top Exchange also established a record earlier this week when it reached roughly $1.29 a pound. The previous high was in October, 1939, at $1.27½.

The double-edged stimulant of large defense orders and vigorous retail demand of civilians has been evident in the woolen industry for many months. Manufacturers have been forced to adopt a policy of restricting orders from civilian sources in order to be certain that when the Government wanted goods or wool it would be available.

Productive facilities of the industry have been overtaxed for months and prospects are that output will have to be pushed considerably higher to meet prospective demand for delivery in the second half of 1941.

Federal Demand Heavy

Trade sources estimate roughly 50 per cent of the industry's facilities will be required to meet Government demands alone and indications point to constantly increasing requirements for retail consumption.

Clothing and other civilian needs required about 46,800,000 pounds of scoured wool in December and brought the total of raw wool consumption of the country to 411,100,000 pounds in 1940, the highest in recent years.

Many trade experts forecast that 1941 consumption will be the highest since 1918 and might exceed that year.

MR. AND MRS. — A Sense of Touch — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

HOW DO YOU EVER FIND THE RIGHT KEY IN ALL THAT BUNCH?
GEE, THAT'S NOTHING
I CAN TELL 'EM IN THE DARK AS EASY AS IN DAYLIGHT
YOU MUST HAVE A WONDERFUL SENSE OF TOUCH
(BUT ON THE NIGHT OF THE STORM)
QUICK, JOE! IT'S RAINING HARDER!
KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON! I'LL HAVE THE RIGHT KEY IN A SECOND
GET OUT OF MY WAY.. I'LL USE MY KEY, IF I CAN FIND IT.
WHO'S OPENING THIS DOOR? YOU OR ME?

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

GEE, UNCLE ELBY, MR. VAN PLAGUE'S UPSTAIRS PACKING HIS BAGS! HE'S GOIN' TO LEAVE! HOORAY! MR. VAN PLAGUE'S GOIN' HOME! WHOOPEE!
ELBY, MY VISIT IN YOUR HOME HAS NOT BEEN ENTIRELY DEVOID OF PLEASANT MOMENTS AND I RATHER FANCY THE NEIGHBORHOOD. YOU MAY BE PLEASED TO LEARN THAT I HAVE RENTED THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR.

JANE ARDEN — Loose Ends — BY MONTE BARRETT AND RUSSELL ROSS

THERE WAS AN AMERICAN HERE LAST WEEK- I FOUND A WOMAN IN THE MARKET WHO SPEAKS ENGLISH-
THAT WOULD BE FRANK POLLARD! WHAT ELSE DID SHE SAY?
SHE SHUT UP WHEN SHE SAW PEDRO LUZ- AS IF SHE WERE AFRAID TO TALK!
PEDRO LUZ- HE OWNS A FISHING SCHOONER-
THEN SHE KNOWS SOMETHING, OR SHE'D HAVE NOTHING TO FEAR-
HE HAS A BIG AERIAL- HE MUST HAVE A SHORT WAVE SENDING SET- NO MATTER WHAT HE SAYS!
HE AND STEIN ARE THICK AS MOLASSES AND WHAT KEEPS THAT FANCY STORE OF STEIN'S GOING? THE TOWN WON'T SUPPORT IT!
H'M- PEDRO AND STEIN- I THINK I'LL HAVE TO HIRE THAT BOAT FOR A FISHING TRIP!

Frazier Hunt, the noted foreign correspondent, whom you hear broadcasting over WJSV at 6:15 p. m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, thought the ease with which he got his first job in New York was rather suspicious.

It was on the Sun. Hunt just walked in, said a few words to City Editor Kenneth Lord and, much to his own amazement, without even asking any questions, Lord just looked at him, smiled and said, "I think you'll do. But just as a formality, come over and meet the managing editor."

They walked over to the office of Managing Editor Keats Speed and Lord simply said, "How do you like this one, Keats?" Then Speed looked Hunt over in the same mysterious fashion, smiled just as enigmatically and said, "He'll do."

It wasn't until ten years afterward, at a party at which both Hunt and Speed were present, that the reason for all the mirth and mystery was explained.

Now Frazier Hunt is 6 feet 4 inches tall. For some reason the Sun's reporters at the time averaged only slightly over 5 feet. And that very day Speed, who is pretty rangy himself, had suggested to Lord jocularly that it might not be a bad idea to balance up the staff with a few tall specimens. It was only a few minutes afterward that Hunt wandered in.

moment of taking a 1,600-point set, down three at a contract of one diamond, redoubled. The adversaries were Robert L. Appleyard and Edward Cook, of Philadelphia.

Maier was trapped on an overcall, and whether his redouble was a gesture of confidence or a plea to his partner to take him out, the diamond contract looked as good as any from Lochridge's seat and so the costly redouble was left in.

The doubleton diamond with the nine looked helpful, and the ace, queen and jack of spades appeared to be trick producers. But as the play developed, Maier never won a spade trick. He tried the finesse, lost, and later Appleyard ruffed the suit.

North opened his singleton club, South overtook with the ten and Maier won the ace. He then played out a small spade and finessed the jack in dummy, South putting on the king. South now cashed his king and queen of clubs, partner throwing off his last two spades. A spade from Cook was ruffed by North, who then led out the ace and ten of hearts. Dummy's jack was covered by South's queen and Maier took with the king, setting up North's nine.

Declarer now found himself shut off from dummy, with only a losing heart and the trump suit in his hand. He led a small diamond toward the exposed hand, which Appleyard cashed his good heart and returned another heart, which Cook ruffed with the ace, declarer being forced to underruff. West finally had to give up another trump trick to North's queen.

Death Valley Scotty Tells How He Fools Desert Cut-Throats

(Special News Service Writer Walter B. Clausen, who has just traveled with Death Valley Scotty over his old desert trails, is telling the story of the mysterious prospector in four daily articles, of which this is the second.)

By Walter B. Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Death Valley, Calif., Feb. 19.—"I never stayed long in one place. I get a scene quickly. If you're on the move, they can't catch up with you."

Death Valley Scotty, the phantom prospector, was telling me how he had managed to wring riches from the torrid desert waste which to most of his rivals has yielded only death or disappointment.

The location of Scotty's mysterious hoard—which has enabled him to build an elaborate desert castle, charter transcontinental trains, and spend prodigiously—even as it baffles Government investigators today, has been the despair of Scotty's cut-throat enemies through the 40 years he has been scouting the valley wastes.

Back around 1903, when the word first got around that Scotty had made a rich strike, he related:

"I knew a fellow named Macklin was being employed to trail me, and I knew he had been talking to a couple of prospectors named Hicks. They told me afterward that they were paid to follow me.

"Well, one day I let slip, so Macklin could hear, that I had a place on a ledge that I had let myself down into.

"About a month later, the Hicks brothers dropped into a camp I had. They said they were just a-prospectin'. We had something to eat. When they left, I yelled 'You'll need a longer rope than that!' It was the first time I'd ever seen prospectors on the desert with a block and tackle.

"I've always had a keen scent, or sense, to figure what was going on, and I never let anyone get around me.

"In Los Angeles one day the bartenders told me there was a fellow inquiring around about me. I went out to Barston and was getting ready to go into the hills when a train dispatcher came up.

" 'Some fellers been asking about you, and they had a couple of bloodhounds shipped in,' he said."

"So I got my mules and struck out in a straight line over the mountains to a covered waterhole 80 miles from Daggett. It was just a little hole—no other within 20 miles.

"I watered the mules, threw some cyanide into the hole, put up a sign 'Poison water' and lit out again.

" 'Course bloodhounds cant' read. When they hit the hole, they just blowed up. Later, I went back to Los Angeles and saw one of the fellers in the bar. I stepped up and said, 'How's your blood hounds?'—and walked out."

Scotty and I were driving out through Wingate Pass on the old 20-mule-team road out of the valley a few days ago. Scotty stopped suddenly.

"This is where they got me," he said. "A feller on a sorrel mule had been trailing me and my Indian. When the shooting started, the Indian beat up back toward Sugar Loaf.

"The feller shot my mule right through the ham. They got me in the right leg, in the thigh. After we both got through bleedin', I got the mule up and we rode 100 miles into Daggett. I fell off unconscious when I got there.

"I have hideouts all over the mountains, with grub that oughta last years, and I think it is still good, if I have to get to it.

Scotty is still "hiding out," in a shack on the northern edge of Death Valley near the Nevada line, about 6 miles from his fabulous desert castle. It was turned into a public showplace when the valley was made into a national reservation.

Scotty may make a trek back to Los Angeles about March 25, when the Federal court will hear a suit against him by Julian Gerard, New York banker.

Gerard, who met Scotty in New York when he was a rider in Buffalo Bill's show and grubstaked him for a gold hunt, claims that under an agreement they made in 1907 he is entitled to some of Scotty's fortune.

Scotty, who remains cryptic about whether his hoard is ore, gold or currency, and where it is, contends that the agreement legally lapsed in 1931.

Save Symphony, Howe Pleads in Letters to Workers

An eleventh-hour appeal to save the National Symphony Orchestra from "disintegration" went out last night to the 800 volunteers working to raise $107,600 for the orchestra's support in 1941-42.

In a letter mailed to all workers, Chairman Bruce Howe declared: "It seems incredible that now, at the very apex of its career, it would disintegrate because of lack of support. I can't believe that the thousands who have loved and who have given so much to this magnificent organization (and it has given much in return) will let it down."

Results of the drive will be announced by Howe at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today in the Carlton Hotel. At the last report, made Monday, the drive was $50,000 short.

With the drive ending today at noon, Chairman Howe wrote the workers:

"I have taken the liberty of writing this to you who have volunteered to bear the greatest burdens of the campaign in the hope that it may be of some help to you in the few hours remaining to us to save the National Symphony Orchestra."

Inventor Asks U. S. Pay Him For Lost Mine

A man who more than 20 years ago mortgaged his mother's home to build the first aircraft-planted mine, only to have the Navy fail to recover it, is in Washington trying to collect a portion of what his invention cost him in order to recover the home.

He is Charles L. Kee, of Portsmouth, Va., an inventor who has several commercial inventions to his credit, a patent on an airplane bomb sight, and designs for other powerful weapons of war. The patents on his aircraft-planted mine, the principle of which has been used by the Nazis in their war on Britain, have expired.

Kee developed and built his bomb after conferences and correspondence with naval officials. He then arranged with naval officials at Hampton Roads, Va., for the test June 26, 1920.

Although the test was successful, according to the participants, the Navy failed to recover the mine. Congress in 1939 passed a claim for $9,000, but President Roosevelt, who was Assistant Secretary of Navy at the time of the test, vetoed it.

The House report on the bill carries letters showing clearly that naval officers participated in the test and admit their responsibilility.

Tendency to Wed Young Shows Gain Since 1890

The tendency to marry and to marry young has gained since 1890.

This was revealed in a study of "Youth, Family and Education" by Dr. Joseph K. Folsom, professor of sociology at Vassar College, made public yesterday by the American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education.

Pointing out that marriage today runs a greater risk of divorce, Dr. Folsom said that the married state is more popular with generations born since 1890 than it was with generations born in the '70's.

Economic functions, education and recreation are today removed from the influence of the home, Dr. Folsom stated. But a sense of personal security, enduring affection and healthful sex life "have gained importance" in the home, he emphasized.

Dr. Folsom pointed to a definite divorce pattern in the United States, with the Pacific Coast leading the entire Nation and possessing a rate three or four times that of the Atlantic seaboard.

"Divorce tends to rise in regions in which it is already high," he said. According to his study, the highest rate of divorce is in the fourth year of marriage. About half of the total number of divorced couples remarry, it was disclosed.

'Indigent' Found To Have $19,336

Attorney Lowell J. Bradford yesterday completed a report on an 81-year-old man who was found to have $19,336.37 in two Washington banks here at the same time he was reported starving.

The man, Frank Betts, was sent to an institution several months ago by the Commission on Mental Health after he was brought to the attention of the police.

Bradford made his report to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court yesterday. In a similar case uncovered two weeks ago an aged man was found to have $43,000 in his possession.

District Provides Expert Advice On Income Tax

Taxpayers of Washington yesterday were invited to the District Building, where a dozen tax experts are ready to aid them fill out returns for the city's income tax. First half payment is due on April 15.

The aides are on duty in the corridor of the first floor, where tables, pencils, forms, and plenty of advice are available.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said some 30,000 forms are yet to be mailed to residents who filed returns last year.
